GRAY.

On Thracia's Hills the Lord of War
Has curbed the fury of his Car.
Thy form benign oh Goddess! wear,
Thy milder influence impart———
To soften not to wound my heart:
The generous spark extinct revive,
Teach me to love and to forgive;
Exact my own defects to scan,
What others are to feel, and know myself a man.

ODE TO ADVERSITY.

Too poor for a bribe, and too proud to importune,
He had not the method of making a fortune;
Could love and could hate, so was thought somewhat odd;
No very great wit; he believ'd in a God:
A post or a pension he did not desire,
But left church and flate to Charles Townshend and Squire.

GRAY of himself.

EDINBURGH:
AT THE Apollo Press, BY THE MARTINS.
Anno 1782.
Hark! the Fatal Sifters join——
Hail, ye midnight Sifters! hail——
O'er the glory of the land,
O'er the innocent and gay,
O'er the Muses' tuneful band,
Weave the fun'ral web of Gray.
'Tis done, 'tis done——
He sinks, he groans, he falls, a lifeless corpse——
O'er his green grave, in Contemplation's guise,
Oft' let the pilgrim drop a silent tear,
Oft' let the shepherd's tender accents rise,
Big with the sweets of each revolving year,
'Till prostrate Time adore his deathless name,
Fix'd on the solid base of adamantine fame.

J. T. TO MEM. OF GRAY.

EDINBURG:
AT THE Apollo Press, BY THE MARTINS.
Anno 1782.
THE LIFE OF
THOMAS GRAY.

THOMAS GRAY, the subject of this narrative, was the fifth son of Mr. Philip Gray, whose father was a considerable merchant, and who himself was engaged in business *, though not to the pecuniary advantage of his family, for being of a fay and indolent temper he suffered those opportunities of improving his fortune to escape him which others would have eagerly embraced. His son Thomas was born Dec. 26th 1716, in Cornhill, London, and sent early to Eton School under the tuition of Mr. Anthrobus his maternal uncle. This gentleman, being both a good scholar and a man of taste, was affiancous in directing the attention of his nephew to those sources of improvement which he afterwards applied to with so much success. During the time of Mr. Gray's continuance in this abode of the Musea he contracted the strictest intimacy with two of their votaries, whose dispositions in many respects were congenial with his own. One of these was the Honourable Horace Walpole, who hath been so long conspicuous for his skill in the fine arts and his love of letters; the other Richard Wilm Esq. son to a late Lord Chancellor of Ireland, and grandson by his mother to the celebrated Bishop Burnet. As the accident of his uncle's being an assistant at Eton was the cause of his going thither for his classical learning, so to this gentleman's being Fellow of Peterhouse in Cambridge it was owing that he was sent to the same university, and admitted in the year 1734 a Pensioner of the same college.

* A money-scrivener.

A iii

The relish Mr. Gray had contracted for polite literature before his removal to Cambridge rendered the abstruse studies which then almost wholly engrossed, and at present too much occupy, the attention of young men altogether tasteless and irksome: still and tho' his thoughts were directed towards the law as a profession for life, yet like Garrick in the picture between Tragedy and Comedy, he hung back with fond reluctance on the Muse. Nor was this bias of his inclination a little influenced by the constant exhortations of his two friends, particularly Mr. West, who was now removed to Christ's Church Oxford, and whose propensity to poetry and dislike to the law appear to have even exceeded his own. After having passed four years in college Mr. Gray returned to his father in Town, where he remained till the following spring, at which time Mr. Walpole being about to travel invited his friend to go along with him. The invitation was accepted, and they accordingly set out for Italy together, but some disagreement arising between them (occasioned, as Mr. Walpole ingenuously confesses, less by his companion's conduct than his own) they parted at Rheggio, from whence, after having made a short stay at Venice, Mr. Gray returned. The time however devoted to this excursion was by no means lost: nothing that our poet saw was suffered to escape him. From no relation, though purposely designed for the publick eye, can so much information be drawn as from his casual letters. During this interval of his friend's absence Mr. West, finding that his aversion to the profession for which he had destined himself (and with a view to which he had resided some time in the Temple) became almost insuperable, wrote to Mr. Gray on the subject, expressing in the strongest manner the ennui that almost overwhelmed him. To this letter an answer was returned which presents the finest picture of the writer's mind; and abounds with a justness of thinking far beyond his years. Gray was now at Florence, where he had spent in all eleven months, amusing himself at intervals with poetical compositions. It was here that he conceived the design, and produced the first book, of a didactic poem in Latin entitled De Principiis Cognitandi, and addressed to Mr. West, a work which he unfortunately never completed. From Florence proceeding to Venice he returned to England, deviating but little from the route he had gone, but particularly taking once more in his way the Grand Chartreuse, where in this visit he wrote on the album of that monastery the following Alcaick ode:

"Song was his favourite and first pursuit;"

Oh Tu, severi Religio loci,
Quocunque gaudes nomine (non leve
Nativa nam certe fluenta
Numen habet, veteretque sylvas;

Præsentioem et conspicimus Deum
Per invias rupes, serra per-juga,
Clivoque praeruptos, tonantes
Inter aquas, nemorumque noctem;

Quam si repobatus sub trabe citrea
Fulgeret auro, et Phidiae manu)
Salve vocant rite, sefo et
Da placidam juveni quietem.

Quod si invidendis sedibus, et frui
Fortuna sacrà lege silentii
Vetat volcens, meneorben
In medios violenta flactus:

Saltem remoto des, Pater, angulo
Horas senectae ducere liberas;
Tutumque vulgari tumultu
Surripias, hominumque curis.

On the 1st of September 1741 he arrived in London, where he had not been much more than two months before his father was carried off by the gout, a malady from which he had long and severely suffered. As the inactivity and ill health of the elder Mr. Gray had prevented him from accumulating the fortune he might have acquired with ease, so his imprudence had induced him to squander no inconsiderable part of what he possessed. The son therefore finding his patrimony inadequate to the profession he had intended to follow without diminishing the income of his mother and his aunt, resolved for this reason to relinquish it; yet to silence their importunities on the subject, he proposed only to change the line of it, and accordingly went to Cambridge in the year 1742 to take his Bachelor's degree. But the inconveniences incident to a scanty fortune were not the only evils he had now to combat. Poor West, the friend of his heart, was overborne by a consumption and family distresses; and these, alas! were burthens which friendship could not remove. After languishing a considerable time under their united oppression this amiable youth fell a victim to both on the 1st of June 1742 at Pope's, and was interred in the chancel of Hatfield church, beneath a stone bearing the epitaph below.

From the time of Mr. Gray's return out of Italy to the date of this melancholy event he seems to have employed himself chiefly in writing, for in this interval he communicated to Mr. West the fragment of his tragedy, and several other pieces. The shock however of so severe a stroke disarranged his plans, and broke off his designs. The only addition he afterwards made to his didactic poem is the apostrophe to the friend he had lost; and nothing can more pathetically

* Here lieth the body of Richard West Esq. only son to the Right Hon. Richard West Esq. late Lord Chancellor of Ireland, who died the 1st of June 1742, in the 26th year of his age.
† Haec tenus haud segnis Naturæ arcana retexi.
Musarum interpres, primusque Britanna per arva.
Romano liquidum deduxi flumine rivum.
Cum Tu opere in medio, fœs tantì et causa laboris.
display the feelings of a heart wounded by such a loss than that apostrophe and the sonnet in which he gave them vent:

In vain to me the smiling mornings shine,
And redd'ning Phoebus lifts his golden fire,
The birds in vain their am'rous decant join,
Or cheerful fields resume their green attire.
These ears, alas! for other notes expire.
A different object do these eyes require;
My lonely anguish melts no heart but mine,
And in my breast the impostor joys expire.

Linuis et aeternam fata te condis in umbram!
Vidi egomet duro graviter concussa dolore
Pectora, in alterius non unquam leuta dolorum;
Et languere oculos vidi, et pallegere amantem,
Vultum, quo nunquam Pietas nisi rara, Fidesque,
Altus amor Veri, et purum spirabar Hoteum.
Visa tamen tardat demum, inclementia morbi.
Cessare est, reducemque iterum rogo ore, Salutem.
Speravi, atque una tecum, dilecte Favoni!
Credulus heu longos, at quondam, fallere solest
Heu, ipse nequecum duis, atque istera vota!
Heu maestos Soles, fine te quos ducere flendo
Per deßideria, et quibus iam cogor inanes!

At Tu, Amata anima, at noli non indigis luxus,
Stellanti templo, fereque ætheris ignis,
Unde orta es, fruere; atque o fi secura, nec ultra
Mortalis, notos obliv miferata labores
Respecte, tempestate nec cognoscere quas;
Humanam si forte alta de sede procpellam.
Contemplère, metus, stimulose cupidinis acres,
Gaudiaque et gemitus, parvoque in corde tumultum
Irarum ingentem, et saevo sub pechore fluctus;
Respice et has lacrimas, memori quas idus amore
Fundo, quod passum, juxta lugere sepulchrum
Dum juvat, et mutae vana haec jacere lavillas.
Yet morning smiles the busy race to cheer,
And newborn pleasure brings to happier men,
The fields to all their wonted tribute bear,
To warm their little love the birds complain;
I fruitless mourn to him that cannot hear,
And weep the more because I weep in vain.

The Ode to Spring was written early in June at Stoke, whither he had gone to visit his mother, and sent to Mr. West before Mr. Gray had heard of his death: how he employed his pen when this ode was returned to him with the melancholy news we have already seen. Impressions of grief on the generality of mankind, like characters marked on the sand of the sea, are speedily effaced by the influx of business or pleasure, but the traces of them on the heart of Gray were too deeply inscribed to be soon obliterated; we shall not therefore wonder at the subjects he has chosen, nor at the solemnity with which he hath treated them. His Ode on the Prospect of Eton College, as well as the Hymn to Adversity, were both written in the following August, and it is highly probable that the Elegy in the Country Churchyard was begun also about this time.

Having made a visit of some length at Stoke to his mother and aunt, our poet returned to Cambridge, which from this period became his principal home. The conveniencies resulting from that situation, to a person of circumscribed fortune and a studious temper, were in his estimation more than a counterbalance for the dislike which, on several accounts, he bore to the place. Less pleased with exerting his own powers than in contemplating the exertions of others, he almost wholly devoted himself to the best writers of Greece; and so assiduously did he apply to the study of their works as in the course of six years to have read with critical exactness almost every author of note in that language. During this interval however he was not so entirely occupied with his stated employment as to have no time for expressing his aversion to the ignorance and dulness which appeared to surround him; but of what he intended on this subject a short fragment only remains.

In the year 1744 he appears to have given up entirely his didactic poem, and to have relinquished, for sometime at least, any further solicitations of the Muse. Mr. Walpole, notwithstanding, being desirous to preserve what he had already written, and to perpetuate the merit of their deceased friend, importuned Mr. Gray to publish his own poems together with those of Mr. West; but this Mr. Gray declined, from the apprehension that the joint stock of both would hardly fill a small volume. A favourite cat belonging to Mr. Walpole happening about this time (1747) to be drowned, Mr. Gray amused himself with writing on the occasion an elegant little ode, in which he hath happily united both humour and instruction. But the following year was distinguished by a far more important effort of his Muse; the Fragment on Education and Government, which is superior to everything in the same style of writing that our own language can boast of, and perhaps any other.

ESSAY I.

—Ποταγ' ὡς γαθεὶς τῶν γαρ αἰδαν
Οὕτη πῶς Αἴδαν γε τὸν ἐκλειδὼντα φυλὰξις. Theoc.

As sickly plants betray a niggard earth,
Whose barren bosom starves her gen'rous birth,
Nor genial warmth nor genial juice reigns
Their roots to feed and fill their verdant veins,
And as in climes where Winter holds his reign
The soil tho' fertile will not teem in vain,
Forbids her gems to swell her shades to rise,
Nor trusts her blossoms to the churlish skies;
So draw mankind in vain the vital airs
Uniform'd, unfriended, by those kindly cares
That health and vigour to the soul impart,
Spread the young thought and warm the op'ning heart;
So fond Instructio on the growing pow'rs
Of Nature idly lavishes her stores
If equal Justice with unclouded face
Smile not indulgent on the rising race,
And scatter with a free tho' frugal hand
Light golden show'rs of plenty o'er the land:
But Tyranny has fix'd her empire there
To check their tender hopes with chilling fear
And blight the blooming promise of the year.

This spacious animated scene survey
From where the rolling orb that gives the day
His fable sons with nearer course surounds
To either pole and life's remotest bounds:
How rude soo'er th' exterior form we find,
Howe'er opinion tinge the vary'd mind,
Alike to all the kind impartial Heav'n
The sparks of truth and happiness has giv'n.
With sense to feel, with mem’ry to retain,
They follow pleasure and they fly from pain;
Their judgment mends the plan their fancy draws,
Th’event prelages and explores the cause;
The soft returns of gratitude they know,
By fraud elude, by force repel the foe;
While mutual wishes mutual woes endear,
The social smile and sympathetic tear.

Say, then, thro’ ages by what fate confin’d
To diff’rent climes seem diff’rent souls assign’d?
Here measur’d Laws and philosophick Ease
Fix and improve the polih’d arts of peace;
There Industry and Gain their vigils keep,
Command the winds and tame th’ unwilling deep;
Here force and hardy deeds of blood prevail,
There languid Pleasure sighs in ev’ry gale.

Oft’ o’er the trembling nations from afar
Has Scythia breath’d the living cloud of war,
And where the deluge burst with sweepy sway
Their arms, their kings, their gods, were roll’d away:
As oft’ have issu’d, hoist impelling hoist,
The blue-ey’d myriads from the Baltick coast;
The prostrate South to the destroyer yields
Her boast’d titles and her golden fields:

With grim delight the brood of Winter view
A brighter day, and heav’ns of azure hue,
Scent the new fragrance of the breathing rose,
And quaff the pendent vintage as it grows.

Proud of the yoke, and pliant to the rod,
Why yet does Aha dread a monarch’s nod,
While European freedom fill with thanks
Th’ encroaching tide that drowns her lefs’ning lands,
And fees far off with an indignant groan
Her native plains and empires once her own?

Can op’ner skies and fans of fiercer flame
O’erpow’r the fire that animates our frame,
As lamps that shed at eve a cheerful ray
Fade and expire beneath the eye of day?

Need we the influence of the northern star
To string our nerves and steel our hearts to war?
And where the face of Nature laughs around
Must sick'ning Virtue fly the tainted ground?
Unmanly thought! what seasons can control,
What fancy'd zone can circumscribe, the soul,
Who conscious of the source from whence the springs
By Reason's light on Resolution's wings,
Spite of her frail companion, dauntless goes
O'er Lybia's deserts and thro' Zembla's snows?
She bids each slumbering energy awake,
Another touch another temper take,
Suspends th' inferior laws that rule our clay:
The stubborn elements confess her sway;
Their little wants their low desires refine,
And raise the mortal to a height divine.

Not but the human fabric from the birth
Imbibes a flavour of its parent earth;
As various tracks enforce a various toil,
The manners speak the idiom of their soil.
An iron race the mountain-cliffs maintain,
Foes to the gentler genius of the plain;
For where unwearied sinews must be found
With sile-long plough to quell the flinty ground,
To turn the torrent's swift-descending flood,
To brave the savage rushing from the wood,
What wonder if to patient valour train'd
They guard with spirit what by strength they gain'd?
And while their rocky ramparts round they see,
The rough abode of Want and Liberty,
(As lawless force from confidence will grow)
Inflant the plenty of the vales below?
What wonder in the sultry climes that spread
Where Nile redundant o'er his summer-bed
From his broad bosom life and verdure flings,
And broods o'er Ægypt with his war'ry wings,
If with advent'rous oar and ready fail
The dusky people drive before the gale,
Or on frail floats to neighbour cities ride,
That rise and glitter o'er the ambient tide?
How much it is to be wished that Gray, instead of compiling chronological tables, had completed what he thus admirably begun! In the year 1750 he put his last hand to the Elegy in the Country Churchyard, which when finished was communicated first to Mr. Walpole, and by him to several persons of distinction. This brought Mr. Gray acquainted with Lady Cobham, and furnished an occasion for his Long Story, a composition in which the different colours of wit and humour are peculiarly and not less intimately blended than the shifting hues on the faces of a diamond. The elegy having been for some time privately transmitted from one hand to another, at length found its way into publick through The Magazine of Magazines. This disgraceful mode of appearance subjected the Author to the necessity of exhibiting it under a less disadvantageous form; and Mr. Bentley soon after wishing to supply every ornament that his pencil could contribute, drew, not only for it but also for the rest of Mr. Gray’s productions †, a set of designs, which were handsomely repaid by some very beautiful stanzas, of which unfortunately no perfect copy remains. In the March of 1753 Mr. Gray sustained a loss which he long severely felt: his mother, to whom his conduct was exemplary for the discharge of every filial duty, and who merited all the tenderness and attention she received, was taken from him by death. The lines in which Mr. Pope hath expressed his piety, beautiful as they are, and much as they deserve to be praised, appear notwithstanding to excite less of sympathy than a single stroke in the epitaph on Mrs. Gray *, or a passage in a letter to Mr. Mason, written the following December, on the deaths of his father and friend: "I have seen the scene you describe, and know how dreadful it is; I know too I am the better for it. We are all idle and thoughtless things, and have no sense, no use in the world, any longer than that sad impression lasts: the deeper it is engraven the better."

† The headpiece to the Long Story, exhibiting a view of Stoke-Poges church and mansion, was copied from a sketch by Mr. Gray. The Churchyard was the subject of his elegy.

Mr. Gray, as is evident by a letter to Dr. Wharton, had finished his Ode on the Progress of Poetry early in 1755; his Bard also was begun about this time, and in the year following the beautiful fragment on the Pleasures of Vicissitude. From the loose hints in his commonplace-book he appears to have planned a fourth ode on the connexion between genius and grandeur, but it cannot now be ascertained if any part of it was actually written. A vacancy in the office of Poet-Laureate was occasioned in 1757 by the death of Colley Cibber. The Duke of Devonshire,

* Here sleep the remains of

Dorothy Gray,

widow, the careful tender mother of many children, one of whom alone

had the misfortune to survive her.

B iiij
being at that time Chamberlain, made a polite offer of it to Mr. Gray through the hands of Lord John Cavendish his brother; but the disgrace brought upon that office by the profligacy and inability of some who had filled it probably induced Mr. Gray to decline the appointment. This part of our poet's life was chiefly devoted to literary pursuits and the cultivation of friendship. It is obvious from the testimony of his letters that he was indefatigable in the former, and that he was always ready to perform kind offices in the latter. Sir William Williams, an accomplished and gallant young officer, having been killed at Bellisle, his friend Mr. Fred. Montagu proposed to erect a monument over him, and with this view requested Mr. Gray to furnish the epitaph. His slight acquaintance with Sir William would have been a sufficient reason for declining the task, but the friendliness of Mr. Montagu's disposition, and the sincerity of affliction with which he was affected, wrought so powerfully upon Mr. Gray that he could not refuse him, though he was by no means able to satisfy himself with the verses he wrote. The professorship of modern languages and history in the University of Cambridge becoming vacant in 1762 through the death of Mr. Turner, Mr. Gray was spirited up by some of his friends to ask of Lord Bute the succession. His application however failed, the office having been promised to Lady Lowther for the tutor of Sir James, from a motive which reflected more honour on her Ladyship than on the gentleman who succeeded. In 1765 Mr. Gray, ever attached to the beauties of Nature as well as to the love of antiquities, undertook a journey to Scotland for the purpose of gratifying his curiosity and taste. During his stay in this country Dr. Beattie (though not the first of philosophers yet a poet inferior to none since the death of his friend, and whom he in many respects resembled) found the means of engaging his notice and friendship. Through the intervention of this gentleman the Marischal College of Aberdeen had requested to know if the degree of Doctor of Laws would be acceptable to Gray; but this mark of their attention he civilly declined. In December 1767 Dr. Beattie, still desirous that his country should afford some testimony of its regard to the merit of our poet, solicited his permission to print at the University press of Glasgow an elegant edition of his Works. Dodgley had before asked the like favour, and Mr. Gray, unwilling to refuse, gratified both with a copy containing a few notes and the imitations of the old Norwegian poetry, intended to supplant the Long Story, which was printed at first only to illustrate Mr. Bentley's designs. The death of Mr. Brocket in the July following left another opening to the professorship which he had before unsuccessfully sought. Lord Bute however was not in office, and the Duke of Grafton, to preclude a request, within two days of the vacancy appointed Mr. Gray. Cambridge before had been his residence from choice, it now became by from obligation, and the greater part of his time there was filled up by his old engagements or diverted to new ones. It has been suggested that he once embaced the project of republishing Strabo, and there are reasons to believe that he meant it, as the many geographical disquisitions he left behind him appear to have been too minute for the gratification of general inquiry. The like observation may be transferred to Plato and the Greek Anthologia, as he had taken uncommon pains with both, and has left a ms. of the latter fit for the press. His design of favouring the publick with the history of English poetry may be spoken of with more certainty, as in this he had not only engaged with Mr. Mason as a colleague, but actually paraphrased the Norse and Welsh poems inserted in his Works for specimens of the wild spirit which animated the bards of ancient days. The extensive compass however of the subject, and the knowledge that it was also in the hands of Mr. Warton, induced him to relinquish what he had thus successfully begun.
Nor did his love for the antiquities of his country confine his researches to its poetry alone: the structures of our ancestors and their various improvements particularly engaged his attention. Hitherto there hath nothing so authentick and accurate on the subject of Go-thick architecture appeared as the observations upon it drawn up by Mr. Gray, and inserted by Mr. Bentham in his Hist. of Ely. Of heraldry, its correlative science, he possessed the entire knowledge. But of the various pursuits which employed his studies for the last ten years of his life none were so acceptable as those which explained the economy of Nature. For botany he acquired a taste of his uncle when young; and the exercise which for the sake of improvement in this branch of the science he induced himself to take contributed not a little to the preservation of his health. How considerable his improvements in it were those only can tell who have seen his additions to Hudson, and his notes on Linnaeus. While confined to zoology he successfully applied his discoveries to illustrate Aristotle and others of the Ancients. From engagements of this kind Mr. Gray’s attention was neither often nor long diverted. Excepting the time he gave up to experiments on flowers, for the purpose of investigating the process of vegetation, (which can scarcely be called a relaxation from his stated occupations) his only amusement was music; nor was his acquaintance with this art less than with others of much more importance. His skill was acquired from the productions of the best composers, out of whose works when in Italy he had made a selection. Vocal music he chiefly preferred. The harpsichord was his favourite instrument, but though far from remarkable for a finished execution, yet he accommodated his voice so judiciously to his playing as to give an auditor considerable pleasure. His judgment in statuary and painting was exquisite, and formed from an almost intrinsic perception of those graces beyond the reach of art in which the divine works of the great masters abound. As it was through the unsolicited favour of the Duke of Grafton that Mr. Gray was enabled to follow the bent of his own inclination in the choice of his studies, we shall not be surprised to find, from a letter to Dr. Beattie, that gratitude prompted him to offer his firstling:

O Meliboea, Deus nobis hæc otia fecit
NaNque erit ille mihi semper Deus: illius aram
Sæpe tener nostris ab ovilibus imbuet agnus.
Ille meae errare hoves ut cernis, et ipsum
Ludere quæ vellem, calamo permiserit agresti.

Accordingly on his Grace’s being elected Chancellor of the University Mr. Gray, unasked, took upon him to write those verses which are usually set to musick on this occasion; and whatever the farcical Junius (notwithstanding his handsome compliment to the poet) might pretend, this was the offering of no venal Muse. The ode in its structure is dramatick, and it contains nothing of the complimentary kind which is not entirely suited to the characters employed. Not long after the bustle of the installation was over Mr. Gray made an excursion to the sequestered lakes of Westmoreland and Cumberland. The impressions he there received from the wonderful scenery that everywhere surrounded him he transmitted to his friend Dr. Wharton in epistolary journals, with all the wildness of Salvator and the softness of Claude. Writing in May 1771 to the same friend, he complains of a violent cough which had troubled him for three months, and which he called incurable, adding, that till this year he never knew what (mechanical) low spirits were. One circumstance that without doubt contributed to the latter complaint was the anxiety he felt from holding as a sinecure an office the duties of which he thought himself bound to perform. The object of his professorship being twofold, and the patent allowing him to effect one of its designs by deputy, it is understood that he liberally rewarded for that purpose the teachers in the University of Italian and French. The other part he himself prepared to execute; but tho' the professorship was instituted in 1724, none of his predecessors had furnished a plan. Embarrassed by this and other difficulties, and retarded by ill health, the undertaking at length became so irksome that he seriously proposed to relinquish the chair. Towards the close of May he removed from Cambridge to Town, after having suffered from flying attacks of an hereditary gout, to which he had long been subject, and from which a life of singular temperance could not protect him. In London his indisposition having increased, the physician advised him to change his lodgings in Jermynstreet for others at Kensington. This change was of so much benefit that he was soon enabled to return to Cambridge, from whence he meditated a journey to his friend Dr. Wharton, which he hoped might reestablish his health; but his intentions and hopes were delufive. On the 24th of July 1771 a violent sickness came on him while at dinner in the College-hall; the gout had fixed on his stomach, and resisted all the powers of medicine. On the 29th he was seized by a strong convulsion, which the next day returned with additional force, and the evening after he expired. At the first seizure he was aware of his danger, and tho' sensible at intervals almost to the last, he betrayed no dread of the terrors of death.

To delineate his portrait in this place would be needless. The reader will acquire the best idea of his character if after perusing his life and his writings he will use his own memory as a cylindric mirror, and collect into one assemblage the scattered features. Of Mr. Gray's religious opinions but little is known; there are however sufficient traces left to shew him a believer. To Lord Bolingbroke's atheism he hath written an answer. His sentiments of Lord Shaftesbury cannot be mistaken; and both Voltaire and Hume he censures with freedom. In private life he was most respected by those who best knew him: his heart was benevolent and his hand liberal.

On his poems it will be needless to bestow praises, or to repel the attacks of envy and rancour. If Mr. Gray was not a poet of the first order there is no poetry existing; and if his bold expressions be nonsense, so are the best passages of Shakespeare and Milton, and the sublimest figures of divine inspiration.
THE LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT OF MR. THOMAS GRAY.

Extracted from the register of the Prerogative Court of Canterbury.

In the name of God. Amen. I Thomas Gray of Pembroke-hall in the University of Cambridge, being of sound mind and in good health of body, yet ignorant how long these blessings may be indulged me, do make this my Last Will and Testament in matter and form following. First, I do desire that my body may be deposited in the vault made by my late dear mother in the churchyard of Stoke-Poges, near Slough in Buckinghamshire, by her remains, in a coffin of seasoned oak, neither lined nor covered, and (unless it be very inconvenient) I could wish that one of my executors may see me laid in the grave, and distribute among such honest and industrious poor persons in the said parish as he thinks fit the sum of ten pounds in charity. Next, I give to George Williamson Esq. my second cousin by the father's side, now of Calcutta in Bengal, the sum of five hundred pounds reduced Bank annuities, now standing in my name. I give to Anna Lady Goring, also my second cousin by the father's side, of the county of Suffex, five hundred pounds reduced Bank annuities, and a pair of large blue and white old Japan china jars. Item, I give to Mary Antrobus of Cambridge spinster, my second cousin by the mother's side, all that my freehold estate and house in the parish of St. Michael, Cornhill London, now Let at the yearly rent of sixty-five pounds, and in the occupation of Mr. Nortgeth perfumer, provided that she pay out of the said rent, by half-yearly payments, Mrs. Jane Olliffe, my aunt, of Cambridge, widow, the sum of twenty pounds per annum during her natural life; and after the decease of the said Jane Olliffe I give the said estate to the said Mary Antrobus, to have and to hold to her her heirs and assigns for ever. Further, I bequeath to the said Mary Antrobus the sum of six hundred pounds new South-sea annuities, now standing in the joint names of Jane Olliffe and Thomas Gray, but charged with the payment of five pounds per annum to Graves Stokeley of Stoke-Poges in the county of Bucks, which sum of six hundred pounds, after the decease of the said annuitant, does (by the will of Anna Rogers my late aunt) belong solely and entirely to me, together with all overplus of interest in the mean-time accruing. Further, if at the time of my decease there shall be any arrear of salary due to me from his Majesty's Treasury, I give all such arrears to the said Mary Antrobus. Item, I give to Mrs. Dorothy Comyns of Cambridge, my other second cousin by the mother's side, the sums of six hundred pounds old South-sea annuities, of three hundred pounds four per cent. Bank annuities consolidated, and of two hundred pounds three per cent. Bank annuities consolidated, all now standing in my name. I give to Richard Stonehewer Esq. one of his Majesty's Commissioner's of Excise, the sum of five hundred pounds reduced Bank annuities, and I beg his acceptance of one of my diamond rings. I give to Dr. Thomas Wharton, of Old Park in the Bishoprick of Durham, five hundred pounds reduced Bank annuities, and desire him also to accept of one of my diamond rings. I give to my servant, Stephen Hempstead, the sum of fifty pounds reduced Bank annuities, and if he continues in my service to the time of my death I also give him all my wearing apparel and linen. I give to my two cousins above-mentioned, Mary Antrobus and Dorothy Comyns, all my plate, watches, rings, china ware, bed linen and table linen, and the furniture of my chambers at Cambridge not otherwise bequeathed, to be equally and amicably shared between them. I give to the Reverend William Mason, Precentor of York, all my books, manuscripts, coins, musick printed or written, and papers of all kinds, to preserve or destroy at his own discretion. And after my just debts and the expenses of my funeral are discharged, all the residue of my personal estate whatsoever I do hereby give and bequeath to the said Reverend William Mason, and to the Reverend Mr. James Browne, President of Pembroke-hall Cambridge, to be equally divided between them, desiring them to apply the sum of two hundred pounds to an use of charity concerning which I have already informed them. And I do hereby constitute and appoint them, the said William Mason and James Browne, to be joint executors of this my Last Will and Testament.
And if any relation of mine, or other legatee, shall go about to molest or commence any suit against my said executors in the execution of their office, I do, as far as the law will permit me, hereby revoke and make void all such bequests or legacies as I had given to that person or persons, and give it to be divided between my said executors and residuary legatees, whose integrity and kindness I have so long experienced, and who can best judge of my true intention and meaning. In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal this 2d day of July 1770.

THOMAS GRAY.

Signed, sealed, published, and declared, by the said Thomas Gray, the testator, as and for his Last Will and Testament, in the presence of us, who in his presence, and at his request, and in the presence of each other, have signed our names as witnesses hereto.

RICHARD BAKER.
THOMAS WILSON.
JOSEPH TURNER.

Proved at London the 22d of August 1771, before the Worshipful Andrew Coltre Ducarel Doctor of Laws and Surrogate, by the oaths of the Reverend William Mason, Clerk, Master of Arts, and the Reverend James Browne, Clerk, Master of Arts, the executors, to whom administration was granted, having been first sworn duly to administer.

JOHN STEVENS.
HENRY STEVENS.
GEO. GOSTLING, jun.

Deputy Register.
THE TEARS OF GENIUS,
AN ODE,

TO THE MEMORY OF MR. GRAY.

(By J. T—.)

On Cham's fair banks, where Learning's hallow'd Majestic rises on th' astonish'd sight,

Where oft' the Muse has led the fav'rite swain,
And warm'd his soul with heav'n's inspiring light,

Beneath the covert of the sylvan shade,
Where deadly cypress, mix'd with mournful yew,

Far o'er the vale a gloomy stillness spread,
Celestial Genius burst upon the view.

The bloom of youth, the majesty of years,
The soften'd aspect, innocent and kind,
The sigh of sorrow and the streaming tears,
Resilient all, their various pow'r combin'd.

In her fair hand a silver harp she bore,
Whose magick notes, soft warbling from the string,
Give tranquil joys the breast ne'er knew before,

Or raise the soul on rapture's airy wing.

By grief impell'd I heard her heave a sigh,
While thus the rapid strain resounded thro' the sky:

Ciij
Haste, ye fitter pow’rs of Song!
Hasten from the shady grove,
Where the river rolls along
Sweetly to the voice of love;

Where indulging mirthful pleasures
Light you press the flow’ry green,
And from Flora’s blooming treasures
Cull the wreath for Fancy’s queen;

Where your gently-flowing numbers,
Floating on the fragrant breeze,
Sink the soul in pleasing slumbers
On the downy bed of ease.

For graver strains prepare the plaintive lyre,
That wakes the softest feelings of the soul;
Let lonely grief the melting verse inspire,
Let deep’ning sorrow’s solemn accents roll.

Rack’d by the hand of rude Disease
Behold our fav’rite poet lies!
While ev’ry object form’d to please
Far from his couch ungrateful flies.

The blissful Muse, whose fav’ring smile
So lately warm’d his peaceful breast,
Diffusing heav’nly joys the while,
In Transport’s radiant garments drest,
With darksome grandeur and enfeebled blaze
Sinks in the shades of night and shuns his eager gaze.

The gaudy train who wait on Spring *,
Ting’d with the pomp of vernal pride,
The youth who mount on pleasure’s wing †,
And idly sport on Thames’ side,
With cool regard their various arts employ,
Nor rouse the drooping mind nor give the pause of joy.

Ha! what forms, with port sublime ‡,
Glide along in fullen mood,
Scorning all the threats of time,
High above misfortune’s flood?

They seize their harps, they strike the lyre,
With rapid hand, with freedom’s fire;
Obedient Nature hears the lofty sound,
And Snowdon’s airy cliffs the heav’nly strains resound.

In pomp of state behold they wait,
With arms outstretch’d and aspects kind,
To snatch on high to yonder sky
The child of Fancy left behind;
Forgot the woes of Cambria’s fatal day,
By rapture’s blaze impell’d they swell the artless lay.

* Ode on Spring.
† Ode on the Prospect of Eton College.
‡ Bard, an ode.
But ah! in vain they strive to soothe
With gentle arts the tort’ring hours,
Adversity with rankling tooth
Her baleful gifts profusely pours.

Behold she comes! the fiend forlorn,
Array’d in Horrour’s settled gloom,
She strews the brier and prickly thorn,
And triumphs in th’ infernal doom;
With frantick fury and insatiate rage
She gnaws the throbbing breast and blasts the glow-

No more the soft Eolian flute†
Breathes thro’ the heart the melting strain,
The pow’rs of Harmony are mute,
And leave the once-delightful plain;
With heavy wing I see them beat the air,
Damp’d by the leaden hand of comfortless Despair. 80

Yet stay, O stay! celestial Pow’rs!
And with a hand of kind regard
Dispel the boist’rous storm that lours
Destructive on the fav’rite bard;
O watch with me his last expiring breath,
And snatch him from the arms of dark oblivious Death!

† Ode to Adversity.
† The Progress of Poetry.
Hark! the Fatal Sisters join,
And with horror's muttering sounds
Weave the tissue of his line
While the dreadful spell resounds.

"Hail, ye midnight Sisters! hail!
"Drive the shuttle swift along,
"Let our secret charms prevail.
"Q'er the valiant and the strong;

"O'er the glory of the land,
"O'er the innocent and gay,
"O'er the Muses' tuneful band,
"Weave the fun'ral web of Gray."

'Tis done, 'tis done—the iron hand of Pain:
With ruthless fury and corrosive force
Racks ev'ry joint and seizes ev'ry vein:
He sinks, he groans, he falls, a lifeless corpse!

Thus fades the flow'r, nipp'd by the frozen gale,
Tho' once so sweet, so lovely, to the eye,
Thus the tall oaks, when boist'rous storms assail,
Torn from the earth a mighty ruin lie.

† The Fatal Sisters, an ode.
Ye sacred Sisters of the plaintive verse
Now let the stream of fond affection flow;
O pay your tribute o'er the slow-drawn hearse
With all the manly dignity of wo!

Oft' when the curfew tolls its parting knell
With solemn pause yon Churchyard's gloom survey,
While sorrow's sighs and tears of pity tell
How just the moral of the poet's lay*.

O'er his green grave, in Contemplation's guise,
Oft' let the pilgrim drop a silent tear,
Oft' let the shepherd's tender accents rise,
Big with the sweets of each revolving year,
Till prostrate Time adore his deathless name,
Fix'd on the solid base of adamantine fame.

* Elegy in a Country Churchyard.
On the Spring.

Lo! where the rosy-bosom'd Hours,
Fair Venus' train, appear,
Disclose the long-expecting flow'rs,
And wake the purple year,
The Attick warbler pours her throat
Responsive to the cuckoo's note,
The untaught harmony of spring,
While whisp'ring pleasure as they fly
Cool zephirs thro' the clear blue sky
Their gather'd fragrance fling.

Where'er the oak's thick branches stretch
A broader browner shade,
Where'er the rude and moss-grown beech
O'er-canopies the glade *,
Beside some water's rushy brink
With me the Muse shall sit, and think
(At ease reclin'd in rustic state)
How vain the ardour of the crowd,
How low, how little, are the proud,
How indigent the great!

* ———— a bank
O'er-canopy'd with luscious woodbine.

Still is the toiling hand of Care,
The panting herds repose,
Yet hark! how thro' the peopled air
The busy murmur glows!
The insect youth are on the wing,
Eager to taste the honey'd spring,
And float amid the liquid noon *;
Some lightly o'er the current skim;
Some shew their gayly-gilded trim,
Quick-glancing to the sun †.

To Contemplation's sober eye ‡,
Such is the race of man,
And they that creep and they that fly
Shall end where they began.
Alike the busy and the gay
But flutter thro' life's little day,
In Fortune's varying colours drest;
Brush'd by the hand of rough Mischance,
Or chill'd by Age, their airy dance
They leave, in dust to rest.

* Nare per ælatem liquidam. Virg. Georg. lib. 4.
† ———— sporting with quick glance,
Shew to the sun their wav'd coats dropt with gold.
Milton's Paradise Lost, b. 7.
‡ While insects from the threshold preach, &c.
ODES.

Methinks I hear in accents low
The sportive kind reply,
Poor Moralist! and what art thou?
A solitary fly!
Thy joys no glitt'ring female meets,
No hive hast thou of hoarded sweets,
No painted plumage to display;
On hafty wings thy youth is flown,
Thy sun is set, thy spring is gone—
We frolick while 'tis May.

ODE II.

ON THE DEATH OF A FAVOURITE CAT,

Drowned in a tub of gold fishes.

'Twas on a lofty vase's side,
Where China's gayest art had dy'd
The azure flow'rs that blow,
Demurest of the tabby kind,
The pensive Selima, reclin'd,
Gaz'd on the lake below.

Her conscious tail her joy declar'd;
The fair round face, the snowy beard,
The velvet of her paws,
Her coat that with the tortoise vies,
Her ears of jet and em'rald eyes,
She saw, and purr'd applause.
Still had she gaz'd, but 'midst the tide
Two angel forms were seen to glide,
The Genii of the stream;
Their scaly armour's Tyrian hue
Thro' richest purple to the view
Betray'd a golden gleam.

The hapless nymph with wonder saw:
A whisker first and then a claw,
With many an ardent wish,
She stretch'd in vain to reach the prize:
What female heart can gold despise?
What Cat's averse to fish?

Presumpt'ous maid! with looks intent
Again she stretch'd, again she bent,
Nor knew the gulf between:
(Malignant Fate fat by and smil'd)
The slipp'ry verge her feet beguil'd;
She tumbled headlong in.

Eight times emerging from the flood
She mew'd to ev'ry wat'ry god
Some speedy aid to send.
No Dolphin came, no Nereid stirr'd,
Nor cruel Tom nor Susan heard:
A fav'rite has no friend!
From hence, ye Beauties! undeceiv'd,
Know one false step is ne'er retriev'd,
And be with caution bold:
Not all that tempts your wand'ring eyes
And heedless hearts is lawful prize,
Nor all that glisters gold.

ODE III.

ON A DISTANT PROSPECT OF ETON COLLEGE.

Ye distant Spires! ye antique Tow'rs!
That crown the wat'ry glade
Where grateful Science still adores
Her Henry's * holy shade,
And ye that from the stately brow
Of Windsor's heights th' expanse below
Of grove, of lawn, of mead, survey,
Whole turf, whose shade, whose flow'rs, among Wanders the hoary Thames along
His silver-winding way:

Ah happy hills! ah pleasing shade!
Ah fields belov'd in vain!
Where once my careless childhood stray'd,
A stranger yet to pain!

* King Henry VI. founder of the college.
I feel the gales that from ye blow
A momentary bliss bestow,
As waving fresh their gladsome wing
My weary soul they seem to soothe,
And, redolent* of joy and youth,
To breathe a second spring.

Say, father Thames! for thou hast seen
Full many a sprightly race
Disporting on thy margent green
The paths of pleasure trace,
Who foremost now delight to cleave
With pliant arm thy glasy wave?
The captive linnet which enthrall
What idle progeny succeed
To chafe the rolling circle's speed
Or urge the flying ball?

While some on earnest bus'mens bent
Their murm'ring labours ply,
Gainst graver hours that bring constraint
To sweeten liberty,
Some bold adventurers disdain
The limits of their little reign,

* And bees their honey redolent of spring.
And unknown regions dare descry:
Still as they run they look behind,
They hear a voice in ev'ry wind,
And snatch a fearful joy.

Gay hope is theirs, by fancy fed, lief's pleasing when possesst;
The tear forgot as soon as shed,
The sunshine of the breast;
Their's buxom health of rosy hue,
Wild wit, invention ever-new,
And lively cheer of vigour born,
The thoughtless day, the easy night,
The spirits pure, the flumb'rs light
That fly th' approach of morn.

Alas! regardless of their doom,
The little victims play!
No sense have they of ills to come,
Nor care beyond to-day:
Yet see how all around 'em wait
The ministers of human fate,
And black Misfortune's baleful train!
Ah! shew them where in ambush stand
To seize their prey the murd'rous band!
Ah! tell them they are men.

D iij
These shall the fury Passions tear,
The vultures of the mind,
Disdainful Anger, pallid Fear,
And Shame that skulks behind;
Or pining Love shall waste their youth,
Or Jealousy with rankling tooth
That inly gnaws the secret heart,
And Envy wan, and faded Care,
Grim-visag’d comfortless Despair,
And Sorrow’s piercing dart.

Ambition this shall tempt to rise,
Then whirl the wretch from high,
To bitter Scorn a sacrifice
And grinning Infamy:
The stings of Falsehood those shall try,
And hard Unkindness’ alter’d eye,
That mocks the tear it forc’d to flow,
And keen Remorse with blood defil’d,
And moody Madness * laughing wild
Amid severest wo.

Lo! in the vale of years beneath
A grisly troop are seen,
The painful family of Death,
More hideous than their queen:

* And Madness laughing in his ireful mood.

* Dryden’s Fable of Palamon and Arcite.
This racks the joints, this fires the veins,
That ev'ry lab'ring fine new strains,
Those in the deeper vitals rage;
Lo! Poverty, to fill the band,
That numbs the soul with icy hand,
And slow-consuming Age.

To each his suff'ring; all are men
Condemn'd alike to groan,
The tender for another's pain,
Th' unfeeling for his own.
Yet ah! why should they know their fate,
Since sorrow never comes too late,
And happiness too swifty flies?
Thought would destroy their paradise.
No more; where ignorance is bliss
'Tis folly to be wise.

ODE IV.
TO ADVERSITY.

Daughter of Jove, relentless pow'r,
Thou tamer of the human breast,
Whose iron scourge and tort'ring hour
'The bad affright, afflict the best!
Bound in thy adamantine chain
The proud are taught to taste of pain,
And purple tyrants vainly groan
With pangs unfelt before, unpity'd and alone.

When first thy fire to send on earth
Virtue, his darling child, design'd,
To thee he gave the heav'ly birth,
And bad to form her infant mind;
Stern rugged nurse! thy rigid lore
With patience many a year she bore;
What sorrow wasthou badst her know,
And from her own she learn'd to melt at others' wo.

Scar'd at thy frown terrisick fly
Self-pleasing Folly's idle brood,
Wild Laughter, Noise, and thoughtless Joy,
And leave us leisure to be good.
Light they disperse, and with them go
The summer friend, the flattering foe;
By vain Prosperity receiv'd,
'To her they vow their truth, and are again believ'd.

Wisdom, in sable garb array'd,
Immers'd in rapt'rous thought profound,
And Melancholy, silent maid,
With leaden eye that loves the ground,
ODS.

Still on thy solemn steps attend, 30
Warm Charity, the gen'ral friend,
With Justice, to herself severe,
And Pity, dropping soft the fade-pleasing tear.

Oh! gently on thy supplicant's head,
Dread goddess! lay thy chast'ning hand,
Not in thy Gorgon terrours clad,
Nor circled with the vengeful band
(As by the impious thou art seen)
With thund'ring voice and threat'ning mien,
With screaming Horrour's fun'ral cry,
Despair, and fell Disease, and ghastly Poverty. 40

Thy form beign, O Goddess! wear,
Thy milder influence impart,
Thy philosophick train be there,
To soften not to wound my heart:
The gen'rous spark extinct revive,
Teach me to love and to forgive;
Exa& my own defects to scan,
What others are to feel, and know myself a man. 42
ODE V.

THE PROGRESS OF POESY. PINDARICK.

Advertisement.

WHEN the Author first published this and the following ode he was advised, even by his friends, to subjoin some few explanatory notes, but had too much respect for the understanding of his readers to take that liberty.

Φανάλα συνέλοισιν ἐς,
Δὲ τὸ πᾶν ἐρμηνευόν
Χαλὶζει.

PINDAR, Olymp. ii.

I. 1.

A W A R E, Æolian lyre! awake*,
And give to rapture all thy trembling strings.
From Helicon’s harmonious springs
A thousand rills their mazy progress take,

* Awake, my glory! awake, lute and harp. David’s Psalms. Pindar styles his own poetry, with its musical accompaniments, Ἀἰσθήσεις μοιχῆ, Ἀἰκίδες χορὸι, Ἀἰολικὸν πίοις ἀνάκκαλος, Æolian song, Æolian strings, the breath of the Æolian flute.---

The subject and simile, as usual with Pindar, are here united. The various sources of poetry which gives life and lustre to all it touches are here described as well in its quiet majestic progress, enriching every subject (otherwise dry and barren) with all the pomp of diction and luxuriant harmony of numbers, as in its more rapid and irre sistible course, when swolen and hurried away by the conflict of tumultuous passions.
The laughing flow'rs that round them blow
Drink life and fragrance as they flow.
Now the rich stream of musick winds along
Deep, majestick, smooth, and strong,
Thro' verdant vales and Ceres' golden reign;
Now rowling down the steep amain
Headlong, impetuous, see it pour;
The rocks and nodding groves rebellow to the roar.

Oh! Sov'reign * of the willing soul,
Parent of sweet and solemn-breathing airs,
Enchanting shell! the sullen Cares
And frantick Passions hear thy soft controul.
On Thracia's hills the lord of War
Has curb'd the fury of his car,
And dropp'd his thirsty lance at thy command:
Perching on the sceptred hand †
Of Jove, thy magick lulls the feather'd king
With ruffled plumes and flagging wing;
Quench'd in dark clouds of slumber lie
The terror of his beak and lightnings of his eye.

* Power of harmony to calm the turbulent passions of the soul. The thoughts are borrowed from the first Pythian of Pindar.
† This is a weak imitation of some beautiful lines in the same ode.
I. 3.

Thee * the voice the dance obey,
Temper'd to thy warbled lay:
O'er Idalia's velvet green
The rosy-crowned Loves are seen
On Cytherea's day
With antick Sports and blueey'd Pleasures
Frisking light in frolick measures:
Now pursuing, now retreating,
Now in circling troops they meet;
To brisk notes in cadence beating
Glance their many-twinkling feet†.
Slow-melting strains their queen's approach declare;
Where'er she turns the Graces homage pay:
With arms sublime, that float upon the air,
In gliding state she wins her easy way:
O'er her warm cheek and rising bosom move
The bloom of young desire and purple light of love‡.

II. 1.

Man's feeble race what ills await!!
Labour and Penury, the racks of Pain,
Disease, and Sorrow's weeping train,
And Death, sad refuge from the storms of Fate! 45

* Power of harmony to produce all the graces of motion in the body.
† Ἄμαρυγάς ἑνὶ ἐπὶ ποδῶν. Ἐκμαζέ δέ ἐκμαζέ. Homer, Od. Ὑ.
‡ Λάμπτει δ' ἐπὶ πορφυρῆσιν
Παρεῖναι φῶς ἐρωτος. Phrynichus apud Athenæum.
|| To compensate the real or imaginary ills of life the Muse
ODES.

The fond complaint, my Song! disprove,
And justify the laws of Jove.
Say, has he giv'n in vain the heav'nly Muse?
Night and all her sickly dews,
Her spectres wan and birds of hoding cry,
He gives to range the dreary sky,
Till down the eastern cliffs afar *
Hyperion's march they spy and glitt'ring shafts of war.

II. 2...

In climes † beyond the Solar Road ‡,
Where shaggy forms o'er ice-built mountains roam,
The Muse has broke the twilight-gloom 56
To cheer the shiv'ring native's dull abode:
And oft' beneath the od'rous shade
Of Chili's boundless forests laid
She deigns to hear the savage youth repeat,
In loose numbers wildly sweet,
Their feather-cinctur'd chiefs and dusky loves.
Her track where'er the goddes' roves was given to mankind by the same Providence that sends the day by its cheerful presence to dispel the gloom and terroirs of the night.

* Or seen the morning's well-appointed star,
   Come marching up the eastern hills afar.  Cowley.

† Extensive influence of poetick genius over the remotest and most uncivilized nations; its connexion with liberty, and the virtues that naturally attend on it. [See the Erse, Norwegian, and Welsh, Fragments, the Lapland and American songs, &c.]

‡ Extra anni folisique vias.——
   Tutta lontana dal camin del sole.  Virgil.  Petrarch, Canz. 2.
Glory pursue, and gen’rous shame,
Th’ unconquerable mind and freedom’s holy flame.

II. 3.

Woods that wave o’er Delphi’s steep *,
Isles that crown th’Ægean deep,
Fields that cool Ilissus laves,
Or where Mæander’s amber waves
In ling’ring lab’rinths creep,
How do your tuneful echoes languish,
Mute but to the voice of Anguish?
Where each old poetick mountain
Inspiration breath’d around,
Ev’ry shade and hallow’d fountain
Murmur’d deep a solemn sound,
Till the sad Nine, in Greece’s evil hour,
Left their Parnassus for the Latian plains:
Alike they scorn the pomp of tyrant Pow’r
And coward Vice that revels in her chains.

When Latium had her lofty spirit lost
They fought, oh Albion! next thy sea-encircled coast.

* Progess of poetry from Greece to Italy, and from Italy to England. Chaucer was not unacquainted with the writings of Dante or of Petrarch. The Earl of Surry and Sir Thomas Wyatt had travelled in Italy, and formed their taste there; Spenser imitated the Italian writers, Milton improved on them: but this school expired soon after the Restoration, and a new one arose on the French model, which has subsisted ever since.
III. 1.

Far from the sun and summer-gale,
In thy green lap was Nature's darling * laid,
What time, where lucid Avon stray'd,
To him the Mighty Mother did unveil
Her awful face: the dauntless child
Stretch'd forth his little arms and smil'd.
This pencil take (she said) whose colours clear
Richly paint the vernal year;
Thine too these golden keys, immortal boy!
This can unlock the gates of Joy,
Of Horrour that, and thrilling Fears,
Or ope the sacred source of sympathetick Tears.

III. 2.

Nor second he† that rode sublime
Upon the seraph-wings of Ecstasy,
The secrets of th' abyss to spy,
He pass'd the flaming bounds of place and time ‡:
The living throne, the sapphire blaze †,
Where angels tremble while they gaze,

* Shakespeare.
† Milton.
‡ flammancia moenia mundi. — Lucretius.
|| For the spirit of the living creature was in the wheels.— And above the firmament that was over their heads was the likeness of a throne, as the appearance of a sapphire stone.— This was the appearance of the glory of the Lord.

Ezekiel i. 20, 26, 28,
He saw, but blasted with excess of light
Clos'd his eyes in endless night *.
Behold where Dryden's pills presumptuous car
Wide o'er the fields of glory bear
Two courser's of ethereal race†,
With necks in thunder cloth'd † and long-resounding
III. 3.

Hark! his hands the lyre explore!
Bright-ey'd Fancy hov'ring o'er
Scatters from her pictur'd urn
Thoughts that breathe and words that burn ||
But ah! 't is heard no more —
Oh, lyre divine! what daring spirit
Wakes thee now? tho' he inherit
Nor the pride nor ample pinion
That the Theban eagle bear ++,
Sailing with supreme dominion
Thro' the azure deep of air,

* ὁρθαλμῶν μὲν αὐρηστὲς διὰ δ' ἡδεῖαν σοῦ ἐν. Hom. Od.
† Meant to express the stately march and sounding energy of Dryden's rhymes.
‡ Haft thou clothed his neck with thunder?
|| Words that weep and tears that speak.
++ We have had in our language no other odes of the sublime kind than that of Dryden on St. Cecilia's day, for Cowley, who had his merit, yet wanted judgment, style, and harmony, for such a task. That of Pope is not worthy of so great a man. Mr.
Maton indeed, of late days, has touched the true chords, and with a masterly hand, in some of his choruses——above all in the last of Caradactus;

Hark! heard ye not yon' footstep dread? &c.

++ Δίος πρὸς ὀρνικὰς Σειών. Olym. ii. Pindar compares Yet oft' before his infant eyes would run
Such forms as glitter in the Mule's ray,
With orient hues unborrow'd of the sun,
Yet shall he mount, and keep his distant way
Beyond the limits of a vulgar fate,
Beneath the good how far— but far above the great.

himself to that bird, and his enemies to ravens that croak and clamour in vain below, while it pursues its flight regardless of their noise.
ODE VI.

THE BARD; PINDARICK.

Advertisement.

The following ode is founded on a tradition current in Wales that Edward I. when he completed the conquest of that country, ordered all the Bards that fell into his hands to be put to death.

I. 1.

' Ruin seize thee, ruthless King!
' Confusion on thy banners wait,
' Tho' fann'd by Conquest's crimson wing
' They mock the air with idle state *.
' Helm nor hauberk's † twisled mail,
' Nor even thy virtues, tyrant! shall avail
' To save thy secret soul from nightly fears,
' From Cambria's curse, from Cambria's tears!'

Such were the sounds that o'er the crested pride ‡
Of the first Edward scatter'd wild dismay,

As down the steep of Snowdon's shaggy side ||
He wound with toilsome march his long array:

* Mocking the air with colours idly spread.

Shakesp. King John.

† The hauberk was a texture of fine ringlets or rings interwoven, forming a coat of mail that fit close to the body and adapted itself to every motion.

‡ The crested adder's pride. Dryden's Indian Queen.

|| Snowdon was a name given by the Saxons to that mountainous track which the Welsh themselves call Craigian-eryri:
Stout Gloster * flood aghast in speechless trance,
To arms! cry'd Mortimer †, and couch'd his quivering lance.

I. 2.
On a rock, whose haughty brow
Frowns o'er old Conway's foaming flood,
Rob'd in the sable garb of Wo,
With haggard eyes the poet looked;
(Loose his beard and hoary hair;)
Stream'd like a meteor to the troubled air ||
And with a master's hand and prophet's fire
Struck the deep sorrows of his lyre.
' Hark how each giant oak and desert cove
'Sighs to the torrent's awful voice beneath!
'O'er thee, oh King! their hundred arms they wave,
' Revenge on thee in hoarser murmurs breathe, 26

It included all the highlands of Caernarvonshire and Merionethshire; as far east as the river Conway. R. Hygden, speaking of the Castle of Conway, built by King Edward I. says, Ad ortum amnis Conway ad clivum montis Erecy; and Matthew of Westminster, (ad an. 1283) Apud Aberconway ad pedes montis Snowdoniae fecit erigi castrum forte.

* Gilbert de Clare, surnamed the Red, Earl of Gloucester and Hertford, son-in-law to King Edward.
† Edmond de Mortimer, Lord of Wigmore. They both were Lords Marchers, whose lands lay on the borders of Wales, and probably accompanied the king in this expedition.
‡ The image was taken from a well-known picture of Raphael representing the Supreme Being in the vision of Ezekiel. There are two of these paintings, both believed original, one at Florence; the other at Paris.
|| Shone like a meteor streaming to the wind.

Milton's Paradise Lost.
Vocal no more, since Cambria’s fatal day,
To hightborn Hoel’s harp or soft Llewellyn’s lay.

Cold is Cadwallo’s tongue,
That hush’d the stormy main;
Brave Urien sleeps upon his craggy bed:
Mountains! ye mourn in vain
Modred, whose magick song
Made huge Plinlimmon bow his cloud-topp’d head.
On dreary Arvon’s shore they lie,
Smear’d with gore and ghastly pale;
Far, far aloof th’ affrighted ravens fail,
The famish’d eagle’s screams and passes by.
Dear lost companions of my tuneful art,
Dear as the light that visits these sad eyes,
Dear as the ruddy drops that warm my heart,
Ye dy’d amidst your dying country’s cries——

* The shores of Caernarvonshire, opposite to the isle of Anglesey.
† Camden and others observe that eagles used annually to build their aerie among the rocks of Snowdon, which from thence (as some think) were named by the Welsh Craigian-eryri, or the crags of the eagles. At this day (I am told) the highest point of Snowdon is called The Eagle’s Neft. That bird is certainly no stranger to this island, as the Scots, and the people of Cumberland, Westmoreland, &c. can testify: it even has built its neft in the Peak of Derbyshire. [See Willoughby’s Ornithol. published by Ray.]
‡ As dear to me as are the ruddy drops
That visit my sad heart——

Shaksp. Julius Caesar.
No more I weep. They do not sleep:
On yonder cliffs, a giddly band,
I see them sit; they linger yet;
Avengers of their native land;
With me in dreadful harmony they join,
And weave * with bloody hands the tissue of thy line.'

II. r.
"Weave the warp and weave the woof,
The winding-sheet of Edward's race;
Give ample room and verge enough
The characters of hell to trace.
Mark the year and mark the night
When Severn shall reecho with affright
The shrieks of death thro' Berkley's roofs that ring.
Shrieks of an agonizing king†!
She-wolf of France ‡, with unrelenting fangs
That tear'd the bowels of thy mangled mate,
From thee || be born who o'er thy country hangs
The scourge of Heav'n. What Terrors round him wait!
Amazement in his van, with Flight combin'd,
And Sorrow's faded form, and Solitude behind.

* See the Norwegian ode that follows.
† Edward II. cruelly butchered in Berkley Castle.
‡ Isabele of France, Edward II's adulterous queen.
|| Triumphs of Edward III. in France.
II. 2.

"Mighty victor, mighty lord,
Low on his fun'ral couch he lies *!
No pitying heart, no eye, afford
A tear to grace his obsequies!
Is the sable warriour † fled?
Thy son is gone; he rests among the dead.
The swarm that in thy noontide beam were born?
Gone to salute the rising morn:
Fair laughs the morn ‡, and soft the zephir blows,
While proudly riding o'er the azure realm
In gallant trim the gilded vessel goes,
Youth on the prow and Pleasure at the helm,
Regardless of the sweeping whirlwind's sway,
That hush'din grim repose expects his ev'n'ing prey.

II. 3.

Fill high the sparkling bowl ||,
The rich repast prepare;
Rest of a crown he yet may share the feast.
Close by the regal chair
Fell Thirst and Famine scowl
A baleful smile upon their baffled guest.

* Death of that king, abandoned by his children, and even robbed in his last moments by his courtiers and his mistress.
† Edw. the Black Prince, dead some time before his father.
‡ Magnificence of Rich. II's reign. See Froissard, and other contemporary writers.
|| Richard II. (as we are told by Archbishop Scroop and the confederate Lords in their manifesto, by Thomas of Walling-
"Heard ye the din of battle Bray*,
"Lance to lance and horse to horse?
"Long years of havoc urge their destin'd course, 85
"And thro' the kindred squadrons mow their way.
"Ye Tow'rs of Julius†! London's lasting shame,
"With many a foul and midnight murder fed,
"Revere his confor't's † faith, his father's ‖ fame,
"And spare the meek usurper's ‡ holy head. 90
"Above, below, the Rose of snow **,
"Twin'd with her blushing foe, we spread;
"The bristled Boar in infant-gore
"Wallows beneath the thorny shade.
"Now Brother's! bending o'er th' accursed loom 95
"Stamp we our vengeance deep, and ratify his doom.

ham, and all the older writers) was starved to death. The story of his assassination by Sir Piers of Exon is of much later date.
* Ruinous civil wars of York and Lancaster.
† Henry VI. George Duke of Clarence, Edward V. Richard Duke of York, &c. believed to be murdered secretly in the Tower of London. The oldest part of that structure is vulgarly attributed to Julius Cæsar.
‡ Margaret of Anjou, a woman of heroick spirit, who struggled hard to save her husband and her crown.
‖ Henry V.
¶ Henry VI. very near being canonized. The line of Lancaster had no right of inheritance to the crown.
 The white and red Roses, devices of York and Lancaster.
+++ The silver Boar was the badge of Richard III. whence he was usually known in his own time by the name of The Boar.
III. 1.

"Edward, lo! to sudden fate
(Weave we the woof; the thread is spun;)
Half of thy heart we consecrate;
(The web is wove; the work is done.")

Stay, oh stay! nor thus forlorn
Leave me unblest, unpity'd, here to mourn.
In yon' bright track that fires the western skies
They melt they vanish from my eyes.
But oh! what solemn scenes on Snowdon's height
Descending flow their glitt'ring skirts unroll?
Visions of glory! spare my aching sight,
Ye unborn ages crowd not on my soul!

No more our long-lost Arthur we bewail:
All-hail, ye genuine Kings, Britannia's issue, hail!

III. 2.

Girt with many a baron bold
Sublime their stately fronts they rear,
And gorgeous dames and statesmen old
In bearded majesty appear;

* Eleanor of Castile died a few years after the conquest of Wales. The heroick proof she gave of her affection for her lord is well known. The monuments of his regret and sorrow for the loss of her are still to be seen at Northampton, Gaddington, Waltham, and other places.

† It was the common belief of the Welsh nation that King Arthur was still alive in Fairyland, and should return again to reign over Britain.

‡ Both Merlin and Taliesin had prophesied that the Welsh should regain their sovereignty over this island, which seemed to be accomplished in the house of Tudor.
In the midst a form divine,
Her eye proclaims her of the Briton-line,
Her lion-port, her awe-commanding face,
Attemper'd sweet to virgin-grace.
What strings symphonious tremble in the air!
What strains of vocal transport round her play!
Hear from the grave, great Taliesin, hear;
They breathe a soul to animate thy clay.
Bright Rapture calls, and soaring as she sings
Waves in the eye of heav'n her many-colour'd wings.

The verse adorn again.
Fierce War, and faithful Love.
And Truth severe, by Fairy Fiction drest.
In bulkin'd measures move.
Pale Grief, and pleasing Pain,
With Horror, tyrant of the throbbing breast.

* Speed, relating an audience given by Queen Elizabeth to Paul Dzialiniski, ambassador of Poland, says “And thus she, "lion-like rising, daunted the malapert orator no less with her "flately port and majestical deporture than with the tartsnesse "of her princelie checkes.”

† Taliesin, chief of the Bards, flourished in the 6th century. His works are still preserved, and his memory held in high veneration among his countrymen.
‡ Fierce wars and faithful loves shall moralize my song.

Spenser's Proem to The Fairy Queen.

|| Shakespeare.
A voice † as of the cherub-choir,
Gales from blooming Eden bear,
And distant warblings ‡ lessen on my ear,
That lost in long futurity expire.
Fond impious man! thinkst thou yon sanguine
Rais’d by thy breath, has quench’d the orb of day?
To-morrow he repairs the golden flood, 137
And warms the nations with redoubled ray.
Enough for me: with joy I see
The different doom our Fates assign: 140
Be thine despair and sceptred care,
To triumph and to die are mine.
He spoke, and headlong from the mountain’s height
Deep in the roaring tide he plunged to endless night.

† Milton.
‡ The succession of poets after Milton’s time.
ADVERTISEMENT.

THE Author once had thoughts (in concert with a friend) of giving a history of English poetry: in the introduction to it be meant to have produced some specimens of the style that reigned in ancient times among the neighbouring nations, or those who had subdued the greater part of this island, and were our progenitors: the following three imitations made a part of them. He afterwards dropped his design; especially after he had heard that it was already in the bands of a person well qualified to do it justice both by his taste and his researches into antiquity.
IN the 11th century Sigurd, Earl of the Orkney-Islands, went with a fleet of ships and a considerable body of troops into Ireland to the assistance of Sigtryg with the silken beard, who was then making war on his father-in-law, Brian King of Dublin. The earl and all his forces were cut to pieces, and Sigtryg was in danger of a total defeat, but the enemy had a greater loss by the death of Brian their king, who fell in the action. On Christmasday (the day of the battle) a native of Caithness in Scotland saw, at a distance, a number of persons on horseback riding full speed towards a hill, and seeming to enter into it. Curiosity led him to follow them, till looking through an opening in the rocks he saw twelve gigantick figures resembling women: they were all employed about a loom, and as they wove they sung the following dreadful song, which when they had finished they tore the web into twelve pieces, and each taking her portion galloped six to the north, and as many to the south.
ODE VII.

THE FATAL SISTERS. FROM THE NORSE TONGUE.

To be found in the Orcades of Thermodus Torfaeus; Hafniae, 1697, folio; and also in Bartholinus.

Vitter orpit fyfir Valsalli, &c.

Now the storm begins to low’r,
(Haste, the loom of hell prepare)
Iron-fleet of arrowy show’r *
Hurtles † in the darken’d air.

Glitt’ring lances are the loom
Where the dusky warp we strain,
Weaving many a soldier’s doom,
Orkney’s wo and Randver’s bane.

Note. — The Valkyriur were female divinities, servants of Odin (or Woden) in the Gothick mythology. Their name signifies Chusiers of the plain. They were mounted on swift horses, with drawn swords in their hands, and in the throng of battle selected such as were destined to slaughter, and conducted them to Valkalla, (the hall of Odin, or paradise of the brave) where they attended the banquet, and served the departed heroes with horns of mead and ale.

* How quick they wheel’d, and flying, behind them shot
Sharp fleet of arrowy show’r — Milt. Par. Reg.
See the grisly texture grow,
('Tis of human entrails made);
And the weights that play below
Each a gasping warrior's head.

Shafts for shuttles, dipt in gore,
Shoot the tremblings cords along:
Sword, that once a monarch bore;
Keep the tissue close and strong.

Misla black, terrific maid!
Sangrida and Hilda see,
Join the wayward work to aid;
'Tis the woof of victory.

Ere the ruddy sun be set
Pikes must shiver jav'lins sing,
Blade with clatter'ring buckler meet,
Hauberk crash and helmet ring.

(Weave the crimson web of war)
Let us go and let us fly
Where our friends the conflict share,
Where they triumph, where they die.

As the paths of Fate we tread,
'Wading thro' th' ensanguin'd field,
Gondula and Geira, spread
O'er the youthful king your shield.
We the reins to slaughter give,
Ours to kill and ours to spare:
Spite of danger he shall live.
(Weave the crimson web of war.)

They whom once the desert beach
Pent within its bleak domain
Soon their ample sway shall stretch
Q'er the plenty of the plain.

Low the dauntless earl is laid,
Gor'd with many a gaping wound:
Fate demands a nobler head;
Soon a king shall bite the ground.

Long his loss shall Eirin † weep,
Ne'er again his likeness see;
Long her strains in sorrow steep,
Strains of immortality!

Horror covers all the heath,
Clouds of carnage blot the sun:
Sisters! weave the web of death:
Sisters! cease; the work is done.

Hail the task and hail the hands!
Songs of joy and triumph sing;
Joy to the victorious bands,
Triumph to the younger king.
† Ireland.
Mortal! thou that hear'st the tale,
Learn the tenour of our song:
Scotland! thro' each winding vale
Far and wide the notes prolong.

Sisters! hence with spurs of speed;
Each her thund'ring falchion wield;
Each besride her fable steed:
Hurry, hurry, to the field.

ODE VIII.

THE DESCENT OF ODIN. FROM THE NORSE TONGUE.

To be found in Bartholinus, de causis contemnendae mortis;
Hafnæ, 1689, quarto.

Upreis Odin Allda gautr, &c.

Uprose the King of Men with speed,
And saddled straight his coal-black steed;
Down the yawning sleep he rode
That leads to Hela's ♠ drear abode.

†Niflheimr, the hell of the Gothick nations, consisted of nine worlds, to which were devoted all such as died of sickness, old age, or by any other means than in battle; over it presided Hela, the goddess of Death.
Him the Dog of Darkness spy'd;
His shaggy throat he open'd wide,
While from his jaws, with carnage fill'd,
Foam and human gore distill'd:
Hoarse he bays with hideous din,
Eyes that glow and fangs that grin,
And long pursues with fruitless yell
The father of the pow'rful spell:
Onward still his way he takes,
(The groaning earth beneath him shakes)
Till full before his fearless eyes
The portals nine of hell arise.

Right against the eastern gate
By the moss-grown pile he fate,
Where long of yore to sleep was laid
The dust of the prophetick maid.
Facing to the northern clime.
Thrice he trac'd the Runick rhyme,
Thrice pronounc'd, in accents dread,
The thrilling verse that wakes the dead,
Till from out the hollow ground
Slowly breath'd a sullen sound.

"Prophecies. What call unknown, what charms, pre-
To break the quiet of the tomb?"

Who thus afflicts my troubled sprite,
And drags me from the realms of Night?
Long on these mould'ring bones have beat
The winter's snow the summer's heat,
The drenching dews and driving rain!
Let me, let me sleep again.
Who is he with voice unblest
That calls me from the bed of rest?

ODIN. A traveller, to thee unknown,
Is he that calls, a warrior's son.
Thou the deeds of light shalt know,
Tell me what is done below,
For whom you' glitt'ring board is spread,
Drest for whom you' golden bed?

PROPH. Mantling in the goblet see
The pure bev'rage of the bee,
O'er it hangs the shield of gold;
'Tis the drink of Balder bold;
Balder's head to death is giv'n;
Pain can reach the sons of Heav'n!
Unwilling I my lips unclove;
Leave me, leave me to repose.

ODIN. Once again my call obey:
Prophetess! arise, and say
What dangers Odin's child await,
Who the author of his fate?

PROPH. In Hoder's hand the hero's doom;
His brother sends him to the tomb.
Now my weary lips I close;
Leave me, leave me to repose.

ODIN. Prophetess! my spell obey,
Once again arise, and say
Who th' avenger of his guilt,
By whom shall Hoder's blood be spilt?

Proph. In the caverns of the west,
By Odin's fierce embrace comprest,
A wond'rous boy shall Rinda bear,
Who ne'er shall comb his raven-hair,
Nor wash his visage in the stream,
Nor see the sun's departing beam,
Till he on Hoder's corse shall smile
Flaming on the fun'ral pile.
Now my weary lips I close;
Leave me, leave me to repose.

Odin. Yet a while my call obey:
Prophetess! awake, and say
What virgins these, in speckless wo,
That bend to earth their solemn brow,
That their flaxen tresses tear,
And snowy veils that float in air?
Tell me whence their sorrows rose,
Then I leave thee to repose.

Proph. Ha! no traveller art thou,
King of Men, I know thee now;
Mightiest of a mighty line——

Odin. No boding maid of skill divine
Art thou, nor prophetess of good,
But mother of the giant-brood!

Proph. Hie thee hence, and boast at home
That never shall enquirer come
To break my iron-sleep again
Till Lok † has burst his tenfold chain;
Never till substantial Night
Has reassum'd her ancient right,
Till wrapp'd in flames, in ruin hurl'd,
Sinks the fabric of the world.

† Lok is the evil being, who continues in chains till the twilight of the gods approaches, when he shall break his bonds; the human-race, the stars, and sun, shall disappear, the earth sink in the seas, and fire consume the skies; even Odin himself, and his kindred-deities, shall perish. For a farther explanation of this mythology see Introduction a l' Histoire de Dannemarc par Mons. Mallat, 1755, 4to; or rather a translation of it published in 1770, and entitled Northern Antiquities, in which some mistakes in the original are judiciously corrected.
ODE IX.

THE TRIUMPHS OF OWEN. A FRAGMENT.

From Mr. Evans's Specimen of the Welsh poetry, London, 1764, quarto.

Advertisement.

OWEN succeeded his father Griffin in the principality of North Wales A. D. 1120; this battle was fought near forty years afterwards.

Owen’s praise demands my song,
Owen swift and Owen strong,
Fairest flow’r of Rod’rick’s stem,
Gwyneth’s † shield and Britain’s gem.
He nor heaps his brooded flores
Nor on all profusely pours,
Lord of ev’ry regal att,
Lib’ral hand and open heart.

Big with hosts of mighty name
Squadrons three against him came,
This the force of Eirin hiding,
Side by side as proudly riding
On her shadow long and gay
Lochlin † plows the wat’ry way;
There the Norman fails afar
Catch the winds and join the war,

† North Wales. † Denmark.
Black and huge along they sweep,
Burthens of the angry deep.
Dauntless on his native sands
The Dragon son of Mona stands;
In glitt'ring arms and glory dreft.
High he rears his ruby crest;
There the thund'ring strokes begin,
There the pres and there the din,
Talymalfra's rocky shore
Echoing to the battle's røre.
Check'd by the torrent-tide of blood
Backward Meinaj rolls his flood,
While heap'd his master's feet around
Prostrate warriors gnaw the ground.
Where his glowing eyeballs turn
Thousand banners round him burn,
Where he points his purple spear
Hasty, hasty rout is there,
Marking with indignant eye
Fear to stop and Shame to fly:
There Confusion, Terreur's child,
Conflict fierce and Ruin wild,
Agony that pants for breath,
Despair and honourable Death.

† The red Dragon is the device of Cadwallader, which all his descendants bore on their banners.
ODE X.

THE DEATH OF HOEL.

From the Welsh of Aneurin, styled The Monarch of the Bards. He flourished about the time of Taliesin, A. D. 570. This ode is extracted from the Gododin. [See Mr. Evans's Specimens, p. 71.]

Had I but the current's might;
With headlong rage and wild affright
Upon Deira's squadrons hurl'd
To rush and sweep them from the world!
Too, too secure in youthful pride
By them my friend, my Hoel, dy'd,
Great Cian's son, of Madoc old
He ask'd no heaps of hoarded gold;
Alone in Nature's wealth array'd
He ask'd and had the lovely maid.

To Catraeth's vale in glittering row
Twice two hundred warriors go;
Ev'ry warriour's manly neck
Chains of regal honour deck,
Wreathe'd in many a golden link:
From the golden cup they drink
Nectar that the bees produce
Or the grape's ecstatic juice.
Flush'd with mirth and hope they burn,
But none from Catraeth's vale return.
Save Aëron brave and Conan strong,
(Bursting thro' the bloody throng)
And I the meanest of them all,
That live to weep and sing their fall.

ODE XI.
FOR MUSIC.
Performed in the Senate-house at Cambridge July 1. 1769, at the installation of his Grace Augustus-Henry Fitzroy,
Duke of Grafton, Chancellor of the University.

I.
Hence, avant! ('tis holy ground)
Comus and his midnight crew,
And Ignorance with looks profound,
And dreaming Sloth of pallid hue,
Mad Sedition's cry profane,
Servitude that hugs her chain,
Nor in these consecrated bow'rs
Let painted Flatt'ry bid her serpent-train in flow'rs,
Nor Envy base nor creeping Gain
Dare the Mufe's walk to stain,
While bright-ey'd Science watches round:
Hence, away! 'tis holy ground.

II.
From yonder realms of empyrean day
Bursts on my ear th' indignant lay;
There sit the faintèd sage, the bard divine,
The few whom Genius gave to shine
Thro' ev'ry unborn age and undiscover'd clime.
Rapt in celestial transport they,
Yet hither oft a glance from high,
They send of tender sympathy.
To bless the place where on their op'ning soul
First the genuine ardour stole.
*Twas Milton struck the deep-ton'd shell,
And as the choral warblings round him swell,
Meek Newton's self bends from his state sublime,
And nods his hoary head and listens to the rhyme.

I.
"Ye brown o'er-arching Groves!
That contemplation loves,
Where willowy Camus lingers with delight,
Oft' at the blush of dawn
I trod your level lawn,
Oft' woo'd the gleam of Cynthia silver-bright
In cloisters dim, far from the haunts of Folly,
With Freedom by my side and soft-ey'd Melancholy."

IV.
But hark! the portals found, and pacing forth
With solemn steps and slow
High potentates, and dames of royal birth,
And mitred fathers, in long order go:
Great Edward, with the Lilies on his brow.

† Edward III. who added the Fleur de lys of France to the arms of England. He founded Trinity-college.
From haughty Gallia torn,
And sad Chatillon*, on her bridal morn
That wept her bleeding love, and princely Clare †,
And Anjou’s Heroine ‡, and the paler Rose ‖,
The rival of her crown and of her woes,
And either Henry † there,
The murder’d faint and the majestic lord,
That broke the bonds of Rome.
(Their tears, their little triumphs o’er,
Their human passions now no more,
Save charity, that glows beyond the tomb)
All that on Granta’s fruitful plain
Rich streams of regal bounty pour’d,

* Mary de Valentia, Countess of Pembroke, daughter of Guy de Chatillon, Comte de St. Paul in France, of whom tradition says that her husband Audemar de Valentia, Earl of Pembroke, was slain at a tournament on the day of his nuptials. She was the foundress of Pembroke college, or Hall, under the name of Aula Mariae de Valentia.

† Elizabeth de Burg, Countess of Clare, was wife of John de Burg, son and heir of the Earl of Ulster, and daughter of Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloucester, by Joan of Acres, daughter of Edward I.; hence the poet gives her the epithet of princely. She founded Clare-hall.

‡ Margaret of Anjou, wife of Henry VI, foundress of Queen’s college. The poet has celebrated her conjugal fidelity in a former ode.

‖ Elisabeth Widville, wife of Edward IV. (hence called the paler Rose, as being of the house of York.) She added to the foundation of Margaret of Anjou.

† Henry the VI. and VIII. the former the founder of King’s, the latter the greatest benefactor to Trinity-college.
And had these awful fames and turrets rise
To hail their Fitzroy's festal morning come;
And thus they speak in soft accord
The liquid language of the skies:

"What is grandeur, what is power?
"Heavier toil, superiour pain.
"What the bright reward we gain?
"The grateful mem'ry of the good.
"Sweet is the breath of vernal show'r,
"The bee's collected treasures sweet,
"Sweet Mufick's melting fall, but sweeter yet
"The still small voice of Gratitude."

Foremost, and leaning from her golden cloud,
The venerable Marg'ret* see!
"Welcome, my noble son!" she cries aloud,
"To this thy kindred train and me:
"Pleas'd in thy lineaments we trace,
"A Tudor's † fire a Beaufort's grace.
"Thy lib'ral heart, thy judging eye,
"The flow'r unheeded shall descry,
"And bid it round heav'n's altars shed
"The fragrance of its blush'ning head;

* Countess of Richmond and Derby, the mother of H. VII.
† The Countess was a Beaufort, and married to a Tudor; hence the application of this line to the Duke of Crafton, who claims descent from both these families.
"Shall raise from earth the latent gem
To glitter on the diadem."

VII.
"Lo! Granta waits to lead her blooming hand;
Not obvious, not obtrusive, she
"No vulgar praise no venal incense flings,
"Nor dares with courtly tongue resign'd
"Profane thy inborn royalty of mind:
"She reveres herself and thee.
"With modest pride to grace thy youthful brow.
"The laureate wreath that Cecil wore she brings,
"And to thy just, thy gentle, hand
"Submits the faces of her swain,
"While spirits blest above and men below
"Join with glad voice the loud symphonious lay.

VIII.
"Thro' the wild waves as they roar
"With watchful eye and dauntless mien
"Thy steady course of honour keep,
"Nor fear the rocks nor seek the shore:
"The star of Brunswick smiles serene,
"And gilds the horrors of the deep."

† Lord Treasurer Burleigh was Chancellor of the University in the reign of Queen Elizabeth.
MISCELLANIES.

A LONG STORY.

Advertisement.

MR. GRAY’s Elegy, previous to its publication, was handed about in ms. and had amongst other admirers the Lady Cobham, who resided in the mansion-house of Stoke-Poges. The performance inducing her to wish for the Author’s acquaintance, Lady Schaub and Miss Speed, then at her house, undertook to introduce her to it. These two ladies waited upon the Author at his aunt’s solitary habitation, where he at that time resided, and not finding him at home, they left a card behind them. Mr. Gray, surprised at such a compliment, returned the visit; and at the beginning of this intercourse bore some appearance of romance, he gave the humorous, and lively account of it which the Long Story contains.

In Britain’s isle, no matter where, An ancient pile of building stands; The Huntingdons and Hattons there Employ’d the pow’r of Fairy hands, To raise the ceiling’s fretted height, Each pannel in achievements clothing, Rich windows that exclude the light, And passages that lead to nothing.

The mansion-house at Stoke-Poges, then in the possession of Viscountess Cobham. The style of building which we now call Queen Elizabeth’s is here admirably described both with regard to its beauties and defects; and the third and fourth stanzas delineate the fantastick manners of her time with equal truth and humour. The house formerly belonged to the Earls of Huntingdon and the family of Hatton.
Full oft' within the spacious walls,
When he had fifty wintners o'er him,
My grave Lord Keeper* led the brawls;
The seal and maces dance'd before him.

His bushy beard and shoestrings green,
His high crown'd hat and fattin doublet,
Moved the stout heart of England's queen,
The Pope and Spaniard could not trouble 16

What, in the very first beginning!
Shame of the verifying tribe!
Your hist'ry whether are you spinning?
Can you do nothing but describe? 20

A house there is (and that's enough)
From whence one fatal morning issues
A brace of warriors, not in buff,
But ruffling in their silks and tissues.

The first came cap-a-pie from France,
Her conqu'ring destiny fulfilling,
Whom meaner beauties eke askance,
And vainly ape her art of killing.

The other Amazon kind, Heaven 28
Had arm'd'd with spirit, wit, and satire;

* Sir Christopher Hatton, promoted by Queen Elizabeth for his graceful person and fine dancing. Brawls were a sort of figure-dance then in vogue, and probably deemed as elegant as our modern cotillons, or still more modern quadrilles.

† The reader is already apprised who these ladies were; the two descriptions are prettily contrasted; and nothing can be more happily turned than the compliment to Lady Cobham in the eighth stanza.
But Cobham had the polish giv'n,
And tipp'd her arrows with good-nature.
To celebrate her eyes, her air—
Coarse panegyrics would but tease her;
Melissa is her nom de guerre;
Alas! who would not wish to please her?

With bonnet blue and capuchine,
And aprons long, they hid their armour,
And veil'd their weapons bright and keen
In pity to the country farmer.

Fame in the shape of Mr. P— t;
(By this time all the parish know it)
Had told that thereabouts there lurk'd
A wicked imp they call a Poet,
Who prowld the country far and near,
Bewitch'd the children of the peasants,
Dry'd up the cows and lam'd the dear,
And fuck'd the eggs and kill'd the pheasants.

My Lady heard their joint petition,
Swore by her coronet and ermine
She'd issue out her high commission
To rid the manor of such vermin.

The heroines undertook the task;
Thro' lanes unknown, o'er fields, they ventur'd,
Rapp'd at the door, not stay'd to ask,
But bounce into the parlour enter'd.

† I have been told that this gentleman, a neighbour and acquaintance of Mr. Gray's in the country, was much displeased at the liberty here taken with his name, yet surely without any great reason.
The trembling family they daunt,
They flirt, they sing, they laugh, they tattle,
Rummage his mother, pinch his aunt,
And up stairs in a whirlwind rattle.

Each hole and cupboard they explore,
Each creak and cranny of his chamber,
Run hurry-skurry round the floor,
And o'er the bed and tester clamber; -
Into the drawers and china pry,
Papers and books, a huge imbroglio!
Under a teacup he might lie,
Or creas'd like dogs in a folio.

On the first marching of the troops
The Muses, hopeless of his pardon,
Convey'd him underneath their hoops
To a small closet in the garden.

So Rumour says: (who will believe)
But that they left the door a-jar,
Where safe, and laughing in his sleeve,
He heard the distant din of war.

Short was his joy: he little knew
The pow'r of magick was no fable;
Out of the window wisk they flew,
But left a spell upon the table.

The words too eager to unriddle
The Poet felt a strange disorder;
Transparent birdline form'd the middle,
And chains invisible the border.
So cunning was the apparatus;
The pow'rful pothooks did so move him,
That will he nill be to the great house
He went as if the devil drove him.

Yet on his way (no sign of grace,
For folks in fear are apt to pray)
To Phœbus he preferr'd his case,
And begg'd his aid that dreadful day.

The godhead would have back'd his quarrel,
But with a blush, on recollection
Own'd that his quiver and his laurel
'Gainst four such eyes were no protection.

The court was fat, the culprit there;
Forth from their gloomy mansions creeping
The Lady Janes and Joans repair,
And from the gallery stand peeping:

Such as in silence of the night
Come (sweep) along some winding entry,
(Styack † has often seen the sight)
Or at the chapel-door stand sentry:

In peaked-hoods and mantles tarnish'd,
Sour visages enough to scare ye,
High dames of honour once that garnish'd
The drawingroom of fierce Queen Mary!

The peer's comes: the audience flare,
And doff their hats with due submission;
She court'sies as she takes her chair
To all the people of condition.

† The housekeeper.
The Bard with many an artful fib
Had in imagination fenced him,
Disprov'd the arguments of Squib∗.
And all that Groom† could urge against him
But soon his rhetoric fortook him.
When he the solemn hall had seen;
A sudden fit of ague shook him;
He stood as mute as poor Macleanet.

Yet something he was heard to mutter,
"How in the park beneath an old tree
"(Without design to hurt the butter.
"Or any malice to the poultry).
"He once or twice had penn’d a sonnet,
"Yet hop’d that he might save his bacon;
"Numbers would give their oaths upon it;
"He ne’er was for a conj’rer taken."

The ghostly prudes with hagg’d face
Already had condemn’d the sinner:
My Lady rose, and with a grace—
She smil’d, and bid him come to dinner‡.

* The reward.
† Groom of the chamber.
‡ A famous highwayman, hanged the week before.
§ Hagg’d, i.e. the face of a witch or hag; the epithet haggard has been sometimes mistaken as conveying the same idea, but it means a very different thing, viz. wild and farouche, and is taken from an unreclaimed hawk called an hagard.
† Here the story finishes; the exclamation of the ghosts which follows is characteristic of the Spanish manners of the age when they are supposed to have lived; and the 500 fanzazos said to be lost may be imagined to contain the remainder of their long-winded expostulation.
"Jesu-Maria! Madam Bridget,
Why, what can the Viscountess mean?"
Cry'd the square hoods in woful fidget;
The times are alter'd quite and clean;
Decorum's turn'd to mere civility;
Her air and all her manners shew it:
Commend me to her affability;
Speak to a Commoner and Poet!"

[Here 500 lines are left.]

And so God save our noble king,
And guard us from long-winded lubbers,
That to eternity would sing,
And keep my lady from her rubbers.

ELEGY.

WRITTEN IN A COUNTRY CHURCHYARD.

The curfew tolls* the knell of parting day,
The lowing herd wind flowly o'er the lea,
The ploughman homeward plods his weary way,
And leaves the world to darknefs and to me.

Now fades the glimm'ring landscape on the sight,
And all the air a solemn stillnes holds,
Save where the beetle wheels his droning flight,
And drowsy tinklings lull the distant folds.

*—squilla di lontano;
Che paia 'l giorno pianger, che si muore, Dante, Purgh. l. 8.
Hij
Save that from yonder ivy-mantled tow'r
The moping owl does to the moon complain
Of such as wand'ring near her secret bow'r
Moleft her ancient solitary reign.  12

Beneath those rugged elms, that yew-tree's shade,
Where heaves the turf in many a mould'ring heap,
Each in his narrow cell for ever laid,
The rude forefathers of the hamlet sleep.  16

The breezy call of incense-breathing Morn,
The swallow twitt'ring from the straw-built shed,
The cock's shrill clarion or the echoing horn,
No more shall rouse them from their lowly bed.  20

For them no more the blazing hearth shall burn,
Or busy housewife ply her ev'ning-care,
No children run to lips their fire's return,
Or climb his knees the envy'd kifs to share.  24

Oft' did the harvest to their fickle yield,
Their furrow oft' the stubborn glebe has broke;
How jocund did they drive their team afield!
How bow'd the woods beneath their sturdy stroke! 28

Let not Ambition mock their useful toil,
Their homely joys and destiny obscure,
Nor Grandeur hear with a disdainful smile
The short and simple annals of the poor.  32

The boar of heraldry, the pomp of pow'r,
And all that beauty, all that wealth, e'er gave,
Await alike th' inevitable hour:
The paths of glory lead but to the grave.  36
Nor you, ye Proud! impute to these the fault,
If Mem'ry o'er their tomb no trophies raise
Where thro' the long-drawn aisle and fretted vault
The pealing anthem swells the note of praise.

Can storied urn or animated bust
Back to its mansion call the fleeting breath?
Can Honour's voice provoke the silent dust,
Or Flatt'ry sooth the dull cold ear of Death?

Perhaps in this neglected spot is laid
Some heart once pregnant with celestial fire,
Hands that the rod of empire might have sway'd,
Or wak'd to ecstasy the living lyre.

But Knowledge to their eyes her ample page,
Rich with the spoils of Time, did ne'er unroll;
Chill Penury repress'd their noble rage,
And froze the genial current of the soul.

Full many a gem of purest ray serene
The dark unfathom'd caves of Ocean bear;
Full many a flow'r is born to blush unseen,
And waste its sweetness on the desert air.

Some village-Hampden, that with dauntless breast
The little tyrant of his fields withflood,
Some mute inglorious Milton, here may rest,
Some Cromwell, guiltless of his country's blood.

Th' applause of lift'ning senates to command,
The threats of pain and ruin to despise,
To scatter plenty o'er a smiling land,
And read their hist'ry in a nation's eyes.
Their lot forbad; nor circumscrib'd alone
Their growing virtues, but their crimes confin'd;
Forbad to wade thro' slaughter to a throne,
And shut the gates of mercy on mankind.

The struggling pangs of conscious Truth to hide,
To quench the blushes of ingenuous Shame,
Or heap the shrine of Luxury and Pride
With incense kindled at the Muse's flame.

Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife *
Their sober wishes never learn'd to stray;
Along the cool sequester'd vale of life
They kept the noiseless tenor of their way.

Yet ev'n these bones from insult to protect
Some frail memorial still erect'd nigh,
With uncouth rhymes and shapeless sculpture deck'd,
Implores the passing tribute of a sigh.

Their name, their years, spelt by th'unletter'd Muse,
The place of fame and elegy supply,
And many a holy text around she strews
That teach the rustick moralist to die.

For who to dumb Forgetfulness a prey
This pleasing anxious being e'er resign'd,
Left the warm precincts of the cheerful day,
Nor cast one longing ling'ring look behind?

* This part of the Elegy differs from the first copy: the following stanza was excluded with the other alterations;

Hark! how the sacred calm that breathes around
Bids ev'ry fierce tumultuous passion cease,
In still small accents whispering from the ground
A grateful earnest of eternal peace.
On some fond breast the parting soul relies,
Some pious drops the closing eye requires;
Ev'n from the tomb the voice of Nature cries,
Ev'n in our ashes live their wonted fires.

For thee, who mindful of th' unhonour'd dead
Dost in these lines their artless tale relate,
If chance, by lonely Contemplation led,
Some kindred spirit shall inquire thy fate,

Haply some hoary-headed swain may say,
"Oft have we seen him at the peep of dawn
Brushing with hasty steps the dews away
To meet the sun upon the upland lawn.

"There at the foot of yonder nodding beech,
That wreathes its old fantastick root so high,
His littless length at noon-tide would he stretch,
And pour upon the brook that babbles by.

"Hard by yon' wood, now smiling as in scorn,
Muth'ring his wayward fancies, he would rove;
Now drooping, woful wan! like one forlorn,
Or craz'd with care, or cross'd in hopeless love.

"One morn I miss'd him on the custom'd hill,
Along the heath, and near his fav'rite tree;
Another came; nor yet beside the rill,
Nor up the lawn, nor at the wood, was he:

* Ch'i veggio nel pensier, dolce mio fuoco,
Fredda una lingua, et due begli occhi chiusi
Rimaner. droppo noi pien di faville: *Petrarch, Son. 169.
†Mr. Gray forgot, when he displaced by the preceding stanza.
"The next, with dirges due, in sad array;"
"Slow thro' the churchway-path we saw him borne;"
"Approach, and read (for thou canst read) the lay;"
"Grav'd on the stone beneath yon aged thorn."

THE EPITAPH.

Here rests his head upon the lap of Earth
A youth to Fortune and to Fame unknown;
Fair Science frown'd not on his humble birth,
And Melancholy mark'd him for her own.

Large was his bounty, and his soul sincere;
Heav'n did a recompense as largely send;
He gave to Mis'ry all he had, a tear,
He gain'd from Heav'n ('t was all he wish'd) a friend.

No farther seek his merits to disclose,
Or draw his frailties from their dread abode,
(There they alike in trembling hope repose)
The bosom of his Father and his God.

His beautiful description of the evening haunt the reference to it which he had here left;

Him have we seen the greenwood side along,
While o'er the heath we hy'd, our labour done,
Oft as the woodlark pip'd her farewell song,
With wifful eyes pursue the setting sun.

* In the early editions the following lines were added, but the parenthesis was thought too long;

There scatter'd oft, the earliest of the year,
By hands unseen, are show'r's of violet's found;
The redbreast loves to build and warble there,
And little footsteps lightly print the ground.

† —— Pavenport's Sicene.

Petrarch; Son. 114.
MISCELLANIES

EPITAPH
ON MRS. CLARKE.

Lo! where this silent marble weeps
A friend, a wife, a mother, sleeps;
A heart within whose sacred cell
The peaceful Virtues loved to dwell:
Affection warm, and faith sincere,
And soft humanity were there:
In agony, in death, resign'd,
She felt the wound she left behind:
Her infant image here below
Sits smiling on a father's wo,
Whom what awaits while yet he strays
Along the lonely vale of days?
A pang, to secret sorrow dear,
A sigh, an unavailing tear,
Till time shall ev'ry grief remove
With life, with mem'ry, and with love.

TRANSLATION FROM STATIUS.

Third in the labours of the deck came on,
With sturdy step and flow, Hippomедon;
Artful and strong he poise'd the well-known weight,
By Phileyas warn'd and s'ird by Mnestheus' fate
That to avoid and this to emulate.
His vig'rous arm he try'd before he flung,
Brac'd all his nerves and ev'ry fine new string.

* This lady, the wife of Dr. Clarke physician at Epsom, died April 17th 1757, and is buried in the church of Beckenham, Kent.
Then with a temper'd whirl and wary eye
Pursu'd his cast and hurl'd the orb on high;
The orb on high, tenacious of its course;
True to the mighty arm that gave it force,
Far overleaps all bound, and joins to see
Its ancient lord secure of victory:
The theatre's green height and woody wall
Tremble ere it precipitates its fall; 15
The pond'rous mass sinks in the cleaving ground,
While vales and woods and echoing hills rebound.
As when from Ætna's smoking summit broke
The eyeless Cyclops hea'ld the craggy rock,
Where Ocean frets beneath the dashing oar,
And parting surges round the vessel roar;
'Twas there he aim'd the meditated harm,
And scarce Ulysses scap'd his giant arm.
A tiger's pride the victor bore away,
With native spots and artful labour gay,
A shining border round the margin roll'd,
And calm'd the terrors of his claws in gold. 25

Cambridge, May 8th 1736.

GRAY OF HIMSELF.

Too poor for a bribe, and too proud to importune,
He had not the method of making a fortune;
Could love and could hate, so was thought somewhat
No very great wit, he believ'd in a God: [odd;
A post or a pension he did not desire, [Squire.
But left church and state to Charles Townshend and

THE END.
fimplex nec despice carmen,
Nec vatem: non illa leves primordia motus,
Quanquam parva, dabunt. GRAY, de Princip. Cogit.

Just Heav'n! what fin, ere life begins to bloom,
Devotes my head untimely to the tomb?
Did e'er this hand against a brother's life
Drug the dire bowl, or point the mur'd'rous knife?
Did e'er this tongue the fland'rer's tale proclaim,
Or madly violate my Maker's name?
Did e'er this heart betray a friend or foe,
Or know a thought but all the world might know?-----
But why repine? does life deserve my sigh?
Few will lament my los'd whene'er I die----
Yet some there are (ere spent my vital days)
Within whose breasts my tomb I wish to raise:
Lov'd in my life, lamented in my end,
Their praise would crown me as their precepts mend:
To them may these fond lines my name endear,
Not from the poet but the friend sincere. AD AMICOS.

EDINBURG:
AT THE Apollo PRESS, BY THE MARTINS.
Anno 1782.
MISCELLANIES.

Advertisement.

THE life of Mr. West was so short, and the events of it so few, that it was judged better to insert the anecdotes which remain of this hopeful youth in the preceding account of his friend than to reserve them for a detached article. Mr. Walpole wished to see their Works united in one volume. The only objection of Mr. Gray to this wish no longer now remains. Had he complied with Mr. Walpole's desire, it is the opinion of Mr. Mason that he would have given only the poems which follow.

AD AMICOS.

[Imitated from Tibullus, book iii. elegy 5, and Mr. Pope's letter in sickness to Mr. Steele.]

Yes, happy youths! on Camus' sedgy side
You feel each joy that friendship can divide,
Each realm of science and of art explore,
And with the ancient blend the modern lore;
Studious alone to learn whate'er may tend
To raise the genius or the heart to mend;
Now pleas'd along the cloister'd walks you rove,
And trace the verdant mazes of the grove,
Where social oft' and oft' alone ye chuse
To catch the zephir and to court the Muse; 5

Vos tenet, Etruscis manat quae fontibus unda,
Unda sub aestivum non adeunda canem.
Nunc autem sacris Baiarum maxima lymphis,
Quum se purpureo vere remittit hiems.

A
Mean-time at me (while all devoid of art
These lines give back the image of my heart)
At me the pow'r that comes or soon or late,
Or aims or seems to aim the dart of Fate.
From you remote methinks alone I stand
Like some sad exile in a desert land,
Around no friends their lenient care to join
In mutual warmth, and mix their heart with mine.
Or real pains, or those which fancy raise,
For ever blot the sunshine of my days;
'To sickness still, and still to grief, a prey
Health turns from me her rosy face away.

Just Heav'n! what sin, cre life begins to bloom,
Devotes my head untimely to the tomb?
Did e'er this hand against a brother's life
Drug the dire bowl, or point the murd'rous knife?
Did e'er this tongue the flandr'er's tale proclaim,
Or madly violate my Maker's name?
Did e'er this heart betray a friend or foe,
Or know a thought but all the world might know?

At mihi Persephone nigrum deununtiat horam
Inmerito juveni parce nocere, Dea.
Non ego tentavi nulli temperanda virorum
Audax laudandae sacra docere Deae.
Nec mea mortiferis infecit pocula succis
Dextera, nec quiquam tætra venena dédit.
Nec nos infana meditantes jurgia mente
Inpia in adversos solvimus ora Deos.
As yet just started from the lists of time
My growing years have scarcely told their prime;
Useless as yet thro' life I 'ave idly run,
No pleasures tasted; and few duties done.
Ah! who ere autumn's mellowing suns appear
Would pluck the promise of the vernal year,
Or ere the grapes their purple hue betray
Tear the crude clatter from the mourning spray?
Stern pow'r of Fate! whose ebon sceptre rules
The Stygian deserts and Cimmerian pools,
Forbear, nor rashly smite my youthful heart,
A victim yet unworthy of thy dart;
Ah! stay till age shall blast my with'ring face,
Shake in my head and falter in my pace;
Then aim the shaft, then meditate the blow,
And to the dead my willing shade shall go.

Et nondum cani nigros læfere capillos,
Nec venit tardo curva Senecla pede.
Natalem nostri primum videre parentes
(Quum cecidit fato consuli uterque pari.)
Quid fraudare juvat vitem crescentibus uvis?
Et modo nata mala vellere poma manu*?
Parcite, pallentes undas quicumque tenetis,
Duraque fortiti tertia regna Dei.

* "There is," says Mr. Mason, "a peculiar blemish in this line, arising from the synonymous mala and poma."—But who that can either construe or scan this line could have taken these words for synonymous?

A ij
How weak is man to Reason's judging eye!
Born in this moment, in the next we die;
Part mortal clay, and part ethereal fire,
Too proud to creep, too humble to aspire.
In vain our plans of happiness we raise;
Pain is our lot, and patience is our praise:
Wealth, lineage, honours, conquest, or a throne,
Are what the wise would fear to call their own.
Health is at best a vain precarious thing,
And fair-fac'd youth * is ever on the wing:
'Tis like the stream aside whose wat'ry bed
Some blooming plant exalts his flow'ry head,
Nurs'd by the wave the spreading branches rise,
Shade all the ground and flourish to the skies;
The waves the while beneath in secret flow,
And undermine the hollow bank below;
Wide and more wide the waters urge their way,
Bare all the roots and on their fibres prey:

---

Elysios clim liceat cognoscere campos,
Letheamque ratem, Cimmeriosque lacus,
Quum nia rugosa pallebunt ora senecta,

Atque utinam vano nequidquam terrear æfilu!

* "Youth, at the very best, is but a betrayer of human life in a gentler and smoother manner than age; it is like the stream that nourishes a plant upon a bank, and causes it to flourish and blossom to the sight, but at the same time is undermining it at the root in secret." Pope.
Too late the plant bewails his foolish pride,
And sinks untimely in the whelming tide.
But why repine? does life deserve my sigh?
Few will lament my loss when ’er I die.
For those the wretches* I despise or hate
I neither envy nor regard their fate.
For me when ’er all-conq’ring Death shall spread
His wings around my unrepining head
I care not †: tho’ this face be seen no more
The world will pass as cheerful as before,
Bright as before the day-star will appear,
The fields as verdant and the skies as clear;
Nor storms nor comets will my doom declare,
Nor signs on earth nor portents in the air;
Unknown and silent will depart my breath,
Nor Nature c’er take notice of my death.
Yet some there are (ere spent my vital days)
Within whose breasts my tomb I wish to raise:
Loved in my life, lamented in my end,
Their praise would crown me as their precepts mend:
To them may these fond lines my name endear,
Not from the poet but the friend sincere ‡.

* "I am not at all uneasy at the thought that many men
"whom I never had any esteem for are likely to enjoy this "world after me." Pope.
† "The morning after my exit the sun will rise as bright as "ever, the flowers smell as sweet, the plants spring as green;
"people will laugh, &c." Pope.
‡ This Epistle was written from Christ-church Oxford, July 4th 1737, in the 21st year of his age.
ELEGIA.

Quon mihi tam grata misisti dona Camææ,
Qualia Maenalius Pan Deus ipse velit,
Amplior te, Graie, et toto corde reposco,
Oh desiderium jam nimis usque meum:
Et mihi rura placent, et me quoq; sæpe volentem
5 Duxcrunt Dryades per sua prata Deæ;
Sicubi lympha fugit liquido pede, five virentem,
Magna decus nœmoris, quercus opacat humum:
Illuc mane novo vigor, illuc vespera fero,
Et, noto ut jacui gramine, nota cano.
10 Nec nostræ ignorant divinam Amaryllida sylvæ:
Ah, si desit amor, nil mihi rura placent.
Ille jugis habitat Deus, ille in vallibus imis,
Regnat et in Cœlis, regnat et Oceano;
Ille gregem taurōfæ; domat, faæviq; leonem
15 Seminis; ille feros, ultus Adonin, apros:
Quin et servet amore nemus, ramoq; sub omni
Concentu tremulo plurima gaudet avis.
Duræ etiam in sylvis agitant connubia plantæ,
Duræ etiam et fertur saxa animasæ Venus.
20 Durior et faxis, et robore durior ille est,
Sincero fiquis pectore amare vetat:
Non illi in manibus sanctum deponere pignus,
Non illi arcæum cor aperiere velim;
Nescit amicitias, teneros qui nescit amores:
25 Ah! si nulla Venus, nil mihi rura placent.
Me licet a patria longè in tellure jubere nent.
MISCELLANIES.

Externâ position ducere fata dies;
Si vultus modo amatus adesse, non ego contra
Plorarem magnos voce querente Deos.
At dulci in gremio curarum oblivia ducens
Nil cupere, præter posse placere meæ;
Nec bona fortunæ aspiciens, neq; munera regum,
Ilia intrâ optarem brachia cara mori.

Sept. 17th 1738.

ELEGIA.

[Addressed to Mr. Gray.]

Ergo defidiae videor tibi crimen dignus;
Et merito: vietas do tibi sponte manus.
Arguor et veteres nimium contemnere Musas,
Irata et nobis est Medicæa Venus,
Meneigitur statuas et inania saxa vereri!
Stultule! marmoreâ quid mihi cum Venere?
Hic veræ, hic vivæ Venæres, et mille per urbem,
Quarum nulla queat non placuisse Jovi.
Cedite Romanæ formosæ et cedite Graæ,
Sintque obliter Helenæ nomen et Hermoniæ!
Et, quascumque reseræ ætas vetus, Heroïnae:
Unus honor nostris jam venit Angliæsin.
Oh quales vultus, Oh quantum numen ocellis!
Inunc et Tuscas improbe confer opes.
Ne tamen hæc obtusa nimis præcordia credas,
Neu me adeo nullâ Pallade progenitum:
Testor Pieridumque umbras et flumina Pindi,
Me quoque Calliopes semper amasse choros;
Et dudum Ausoniae urbes, et visere Graias:
Cura est, ingenio si licet ire meo:
Sive est Phidianum marmor, seu mentoris aera,
Seu paries Coelo nobilis e calamo;
Nec minus artificum magna argumenta recentum
Romanique decus nominis et Veneti:
Qua Furor et Mavors et saxo in Marmore vultus,
Quaque et formoso mollior are Venus.
Quaque loquax spirat fucus, vivique labores,
Et quicquid calamo dulcius ausa manus:
Hic nemora, et sola marrens Meliboeus in umbrâ,
Lymphaque muscofo profiliens lapide;
Illic majus opus, facie que in pariete major
Exurgens, Divum et numina Coelicolum;
O vos faelices, quibus haec cognoscere fas est,
Et tota Italia, qua patet usque, frui!
Nulla dies vobis cat in jucunda, nec usquam
Noritis quid sit tempora amara pati.

It was the production of four o'clock in the morning, while I lay in my bed toasting and coughing, and all unable to sleep.

Ante omnes morbos importunissima tussis,
Qua durare datur, traxitque sub ilia vires:
Dura etenim versans imo sub pectore regna,
Perpetuo exercet teneras lucatamine costas,
Oraque distorquet, vocemque immutat anhelam:
Nec cessare locus: sed saxo concita motu
Molle domat latus, et corpus labor omne fatigat:
ODE.

Dear Gray! that always in my heart
Possesses far the better part,
What mean these sudden blasts that rise,
And drive the zephyrs from the skies?
O, join with mine thy tuneful lay,
And invoke the tardy May.

Come, fairest nymph! resume thy reign,
Bring all the Graces in thy train:
With balmy breath and flow’ry tread
Rise from thy soft ambrosial bed,
Where in Elysian slumber bound
Embow’ring myrtles veil thee round.

Awake, in all thy glories drest,
Recall the zephyrs from the west;
 Restore the sun, revive the skies,
At mine and Nature’s call arise!
Great Nature’s self upbraids thy stay,
And misses her accustom’d May.
The labours of Pomona fade,
Each budding flower retells for thee,
The birds forget to love and sing,
With forms alone the forel's ring.

Come then, with Pleasure at thy fide,
Diffuse thy vernal spirit wide:
Create where thou turn'th thy eye
Peace, plenty, love, and harmony,
Till evry being share its part
And heav'n and earth be glad at heart.
MISCELLANIES.

TO MR. GRAY.

O Meæ jucunda comes quietis!
Quæ fere ægrotum solita es levare
Pectus, et sensim ah! nimis ingruentis
Fallere curas:

Quid canes? quanto Lyra dic furore
Gesties, quando hac reducem sodalem
Glauciam * gaudere simul videbis
Meque sub umbra?

* Mr. Gray.

CÆTERA DESIDERANTUR.
CONTENTS.

GRAY.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Life of the Author</td>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>His last will and testament</td>
<td>25</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ode to memory of Mr. Gray, by J. T.</td>
<td>29</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

ODES.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Ode I. on the spring</td>
<td>35</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II. on the death of a favourite cat</td>
<td>37</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III. on a distant prospect of Eton College</td>
<td>39</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>IV. on adversity</td>
<td>43</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>V. the progress of poetry</td>
<td>46</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>VI. the Bard</td>
<td>54</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>VII. the Fatal Sifters</td>
<td>65</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>VIII. the descent of Odin</td>
<td>68</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>IX. the triumphs of Owen</td>
<td>73</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>X. the death of Hoel</td>
<td>75</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>XI. for music</td>
<td>76</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

MISCELLANIES.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>A long story</td>
<td>81</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Elegy. Written in a country churchyard</td>
<td>87</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Epitaph on Mrs. Clarke</td>
<td>93</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Translation from Statius</td>
<td>ib.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Gray of himself</td>
<td>94</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

WEST.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Ad Amicos,</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Elegia, &quot;Quod mihi,&quot; &amp;c.</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ditto, addressed to Mr. Gray, &quot;Ergodesidæ,&quot; &amp;c.</td>
<td>7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Production of four o’clock in the morning, &quot;Ante omnes,&quot; &amp;c.</td>
<td>8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ode to May,</td>
<td>9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>From the Greek of Posidippus, &quot;Perspicui,&quot; &amp;c.</td>
<td>10</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>To Mr. Gray, &quot;O meæ jucunda,&quot; &amp;c.</td>
<td>11</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

From the APOLLO PRESS,
by the MARTINS,
Aug. 3. 1782.

THE END.